This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

The Council are not answerable for any opinions put forth in their publications. Each Contributor is alone responsible for his own remarks.

Authors would greatly further the interests of the Institute and save much unnecessary expense in the correction of proofs, if they would be good enough to have their contributions typewritten, and on only one side of the paper.

ANNUAL REPORT for 1934.

In this Silver Jubilee year it is befitting that we, as an Archæological Society, review our stewardship during the past quarter of a century.

Since our inception as a Society in 1848 the callous indifference then shown in the County generally towards archæology and the archæologist has entirely changed in tone and Suffolk has become archæologically-minded.

We have prepared the way and can claim directly or indirectly to be the mother of innumerable benefits to the common weal, such as the Diocesan Advisory Board, Ordnance Survey, Village histories, Newspaper efforts—as for example, the Miscellany Column and "Suffolk Parishes" in the "East Anglian Daily Times." Also for giving birth to the incentive for preserving rural amenities, for safe guarding ancient monuments in town planning schemes and other beneficial activities, which enable us to dwell upon the Silver Jubilee retrospect with pleasureable satisfaction.

Our List of Members for 1934 shows a small numerical decrease, from 400 to 390, occasioned by the Agricultural depression and the consequent falling off in the payment of tithe which compelled several clerical members to resign the luxury of membership.

During the year we had 23 resignations and 7 deaths, whilst the number of new members was 38.

Prominent among our losses through death is that of the Rev. Edmund Farrer, who, although he has passed from among us in person, will ever be present in the valuable contributions he has made to our literature.

The Excursions for 1934 maintained their high level of efficiency and edification, owing to the proficiency displayed by our Excursion Directors.

Our thanks are due to Mr. Hugh Braun for his Lecture on Castles and to Mr. R. H. Pearson for that on Re-used Brasses.

The Editor regrets that owing to lack of space various contributions to our Proceedings are held over for future consideration.

H. A. HARRIS,
Hon. Sec. and Editor.

LIBRARY BYE-LAWS.

At the Annual Meeting held on May 10th, 1933, Mr. E. R. Burdon was elected Librarian and the following Bye-laws are subject to revision.

1. The Librarian shall make a yearly report to the Annual General Meeting, stating the condition and needs of the Library, and what has been done in the past year, and what books have been added by gift, purchase, or exchange.

2. It shall be the business of the Librarian to see that the publications of the various archæological societies (which are received by exchange) be bound, as soon as each volume is complete.

3. Any member borrowing a book from the Library must enter his or her name in the book kept for that purpose. Anyone failing to do this, when the book is taken out, shall be fined one shilling.

4. All books must be brought back, and entered as brought back, within three months of their having been taken out. Any member failing to bring a book back, and to enter it as brought back, within three months, will be fined one shilling.

5. No members may have more than five volumes out at one time.

6. No MSS. may be taken out from the Library, nor certain valuable printed books, a list of which is kept by the Librarian, except by permission of the Council.

7. No non-member of the Institute shall be allowed to use the Library, except by permission of the General Secretary, or when accompanied by a Member of the Institute.

NOTE.—The keys to the book-cases are kept in the drawer of the Library table.

The Library is open for the use of members from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. daily, except Sundays, when the Athenæum is closed.

LIST OF BOOKS WHICH ARE NOT TO BE REMOVED FROM THE LIBRARY.

All MSS. — Pamphlets, Suffolk Mercury or St. Edmundsbury Post — The Jermyn Collection — Page's Supplement to Kirby, Suffolk Traveller, Extra Illustrated — Papworth's Armorial — Prynne's New Discovery of Prelate's Tyranny — Josselyn's Two Voyages to New England — Moxon's Mechanical Powers — Eikon Basilike, 1648 — Poll Books — Cox's History of Ireland — Culpepper, Anatomy of Bartholomew — Massachusetts Historical Collections.

LIBRARY REPORT for 1934.

It is my privilege and pleasure to report that during the year the Library has been extensively used by Subscribers, more particularly for reference purposes, and Members have expressed their appreciation of the accommodation of the books being housed at the Athenæum, more so as they are available at all hours in the day.

Concentrating on Suffolk a very considerable number of books have been added to the Library.

A number of deeds relating to the Ashburnham estates in Suffolk have been presented by Lady Ashburnham, for which thanks are greatly due.

Hon. Librarian.

THE STAINED AND PAINTED GLASS IN HENGRAVE HALL, SUFFOLK.

By the Rev. Christopher Woodforde, M.A.

In 1521 Sir Thomas Kytson, or "Kytson the Merchant" as he was known to his contemporaries, contracted with Edward, Duke of Buckingham for the purchase of the Manor of Hengrave. He began to build the Hall in 1525 and completed it in thirteen years.

The painted glass is by no means the least beautiful part of this magnificent house. It may be divided into three portions: (i) Armorial glass painted for windows of the house. (ii) Armorial glass now in windows of the house, but brought from elsewhere, often being earlier in date than the house itself. (iii) The twenty-one panels, showing Biblical subjects, in the great east window of the chapel.

John Gage, in his History and Antiquities of Hengrave, (London, 1822), describes in detail the armorial glass in the cloisters and banqueting hall, and gives, in bare outline, the subject-matter of the chapel window glass. In the main his notes are correct, but he makes a few slips, and certain shields of arms are now moved from the windows where he saw them.

Cloisters.

I. a. Azure, three crowns or, St. Edmund or East Anglia. b. Quarterly, 1. arg. a cross engrailed gu. between four water-bougets sa. Bourchier. 2. gu. a fess arg. between fourteen billets or, Lovayne. 3. quarterly, per fesse indented erm. and gu. Fitzwarren. 4. gu. a fret or, Audley. 5. gu. three oak-leaves arg. Cogan. 6. sa. a chevron barry nebulé arg. and gu. Hankford. 7. gu. two bendlets wavy (in outline only), Brewer. 8. arg. two bars gu. each charged with three besants, Martin. 9. gu. a fess dancetté erm. Dinham. 10. gu. three arches or, Archer. The whole impales Sa. three luces haurient arg. a chief or Kytson, impaling quarterly, 1 and 4, paly of six arg. and az. on a chief three besants, Donnington. 2 and 3, arg. a chevron between three mullets gu. Broughton. Supporters, on dexter side a falcon arg. on sinister side a lion gu. collared and chained or. Below, upon a scroll, Bon temps viendra.

This very complicated coat is for John Bouchier, Earl of Bath, and Margaret his wife. The second wife of Sir Thomas Kytson was Margaret, only child of John Donnington, of Stoke Newington, co. Middlesex After the death of Sir Thomas Kytson she married Sir Richard Long, of Shingay, co. Cambs. At the end of 1547 she married John Bouchier, Earl of Bath. A grand monument in Hengrave church bears the recumbent effigies of the Earl and Countess and of Sir Thomas Kytson.

c. Arg. a lion rampant gu. debruised by a bend az. charged with three besants, Bokenham. Hugh Bokenham was the superviser of the will of Thomas Hethe, of Hengrave Hall, who died in 1439. The shield may be dated in the second half of the 15th century.

II. a. Quarterly. 1 and 4, vert, a lion rampant az, vulned in the shoulder gu. Robsart. 2 and 3, Bouchier. This shield is of early 15th century date. b. Kytson. c. Arg. a squirrel sejant eating a nut, gu. impaling arg. on a chevron, between three wyverns' heads erased sa. langued or, a cross flory of the first. Gage leaves this coat unidentified, but it is said to represent alliances of the Squire family. The glass is of the 15th century.

III. a. Quarterly, 1 and 4, arg. a fesse between two chevronels gu. Peche. 2 and 3, az. three chevronels or. Aspal. Sir John Aspal, of Lackford, and Catherine (Peche) his wife were alive in 1366. Their grandson, Thomas Gedding, assumed the coat and it is probably he who is commemorated in this coat. b. Kytson. c. Or, on a chevron within a bordure engrailed gu. a mitre of the field, John Stafford, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1443-1452.

IV. a. Arg. a chief indented gu. Hengrave. The date of the glass best accords with Sir Thomas de Hemegrave, Lord of the Manor of Hengrave, who died in 1419. b. Kytson. c. Sa. a bend arg. cottised dancetté or, an ermine spot in a chief arg. Clopton. Date, last quarter of the 15th century.

UPPER CORRIDOR.

In each window is the coat of Kytson. Sir Thomas Kytson bore Sa. three luces hauriant arg. on a chief or, a lion rampant of the field gutté of the chief, between two pellets; on the first pellet a martlet, on the second an anchor of the chief. This coat was granted in 1527. It appears in one window. Sir Thomas Kytson, the son and heir, simplified this coat, receiving a fresh grant in 1568. He bore Sa. three luces hauriant arg. a chief or. It is plain that he had the arms (save the one mentioned) in the Upper Corridor changed, the plain yellow chief being substituted for that bearing further charges of his father's coat. Both grants of arms are preserved at Hengrave, and are fine examples of their periods.

Gage, speaking of the glass once to be seen in Hengrave church, gives the following information: "Sir John Cullum, who visited the church in 1778, notices that the coats of arms in the cloisters of Hengrave Hall, were taken from the two north windows (of the chancel)."* This can hardly be true of the shields bearing the arms of the Kytsons and the allied families, for these were obviously painted for the Hall and, probably, for their present positions. Cullum must refer to the earlier arms, such as those of Bokenham, Aspal, Hengrave and Archbishop Stafford.

BANQUETING HALL.

The oriel window contains ten shields of arms.

a. Kytson. b. Arms of the Earl of Bath, like that in the first cloister window. c. Kytson impaling Donnington. d. Kytson, quarterly with Donnington, impaling Sa. on a cross ingrailed, between four eagles displayed arg. five lions passant of the field, Paget. In 1557 Sir Thomas Kytson II married Jane, daughter of William Lord Paget. e. Kytson, quarterly with Donnington, impaling 1. sa. gutté d'eau, on a fesse arg. three cornish choughs. Cornwallis, 2. sa. three bars gemelles arg. on a canton of the second a crescent of the field, Bucton, 3. sa. a cross moline or, Braham, 4. arg. a bend between six crosslets fitché sa. Teye. 5. arg. within a bordure engrailed gu. two chevronels az. Tyrrel. 6. az. a chevron between three sea-pies arg. Stamford. Sir Thomas Kytson II married secondly, in 1560, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Cornwallis, of Brome, co. Suffolk.

Hist. Hengrave*, p. 39.

This shield is surrounded with a beautiful border, showing cupids, cornucopia and satyrs holding masks.

f. Quarterly, 1 and 4. sa. three harts' heads caboched arg. attired or, Cavendish. 2 and 3, arg. a chevron sa. between three crosslets gu. Smith, impaling Kytson quartering Donnington. Below Cauendysh & Kytsonne. In 1582 Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Kytson II, married Sir Charles Cavendish, of Welbeck Abbey, co. Notts.

g. Quarterly, 1. arg. three cinquefoils gu., Darcy. 2. arg. a fesse between six oak leaves gu. Fitzlangley, 3. arg. a fess erminois between two bars gemelles sa. Harleston. 4. arg. a chevron, in the dexter canton an annulet sa. Wauton. 5, gu. a goat salient arg. Bardwell. 6. quarterly gu. and arg. in the first quarter an eagle displayed vert, Pakenham ; the whole impaling Kytson. Mary, the third child of Sir Thomas Kytson II married, in 1583, Thomas, Lord Darcy, Earl Rivers. Thomas, Lord Darcy, thus came into possession of Hengrave. The marriage was not a happy one.†

Gage does not mention this shield as being in the oriel window. He saw the arms of Darcy, of Cavendish and the Royal arms in a window over the gate-house, but the Darcy and Cavendish shields differs from those in the banqueting hall, having supporters, in the one case of griffons, in the other unicorns.‡ The gate-house shields have disappeared.

†Gage, Hist. Hengrave, pp. 214 ff. ‡Gage, Hist. Hengrave, pp. 18-19.

These last two shields are a pair, as is shown by their size, shape and type of mantling. Some beautiful water-colour copies of these and other shields by John Pizay, done in 1748, illustrate a MS. book written by Sir Thomas Gage. This book, in several volumes, is entitled Remains of Antiquities in the County of Suffolk, 1813. These water-colours show that of the names below these two shields only Kytsonne and L. Darcy & are old glass.

h. Quarterly, 1 and 4, sa. a lion rampant between eight crosslets arg. Long. 2, arg. on a chief gu. a besant, between two stags' heads caboched or, Bradley. 3. gu. two wings conjoined in lure, a crescent for difference or, Seymour. This shield is set upon a patterned blue background within a border done in white glass and "stain." Sir Richard Long, of Shingay and Hardwick, co. Cambs, Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to Henry VIII, Master of the Buckhounds and Hawks, Captain of Guernsey, married Magaret, widow of Sir Thomas Kytson I.

i. Upon a patterned blue background, Nebulé arg. and az. a chief quarterly, 1 and 4, gu. a lion passant guardant or, 2 and 3, two roses of the third, Merchant Adventurers. Of this company Sir Thomas Kytson was a prominent member.

j. Quarterly, 1 and 4, arg. two bars with three mullets in chief gu. (Here they are in outline), Washington. 2 and 3, az. a cross flory between four cinquefoils or, Laurence. Crest, a demi-eagle with wings addorsed sable, issuing from a ducal coronet or, and charged on the breast with a crescent of the second. There is also a crescent on the shield. The arms are dated 1598. Margaret, the sister of Sir Thomas Kytson I, married John Washington, of Wharton. "Their second son Thomas was apprenticed to Sir Thomas Kytson to learn the mysteries of the London Mercers' Company."* The crescent on arms and crest is the "difference" for the second son. The special interest of this shield lies in the fact that upon the Washington arms is founded the flag of the United States of America, George Washington being the first President.

LIBRARY.

This series of shields has an interesting history.† They were originally in windows of New Buckenham church, co. Norfolk, together with a great deal more painted glass. They found their way into the hands of a Thetford glazier named Burrel. At the beginning of the 19th century they were bought by Sir Thomas Gage Rokewode. His reason for buying them was doubtless because the bearings of Stafford and Grey are among those represented, and the families of Stafford, Dukes of Buckingham, and of Lord Grey of Codnor had been connected with Hengrave Hall.

The arms are as follows: a. Quarterly, 1 and 4, arg. within a bordure engrailed a bend sa. Knevet. 2 and 3, chequy or and gu. a bend erm. Clifton. Over it, in black-letter, Knyvet et Knyvet. Prince Duleep Singh calls this a "somewhat curious inscription," but offers no explanation of it. A lead comes immediately after the first word; it seems likely, therefore, that one half of the inscription comes from above some other shield.

b. Quarterly, 1. within a bordure arg. France and England quartered, Plantagenet "Woodstock," 2 and 3, az. on a bend arg. cottised between six lioncels or three pierced mullets gu. Bohun. 4. or, a chevron gu. Stafford.

c. Quarterly, 1 and 4, or, three torteaux gu. Courtney. 2 and 3, or a lion rampant azure. Redvers, impaling England and France quarterly within a bordure arg. and az. Beaufort, over az. a bend cottised arg. between six lioncels or, Bohun.

d. Quarterly, 1 and 4, barry of six arg. and az. in chief three torteaux, a crescent or for difference, Grey. 2. quarterly quartered, 1. gu. within a bordure or a maunche of the second, Hastings. 2 and 3, barruly arg. and az. an orle of martlets gu. Valence. 3. Hastings quartering Valence. Above the shield, Gray Rythyn, ye erle of Kent.

†It has been fully worked out by Prince F. Duleep Singh with the help of the Rev. Edmund Farrer—Armorial Glass in Old and New Buckenham Churches, Norfolk Archaeology, Vol. XV, pp. 324 ff and illustrations.

The last three shields represent the bearings of the three wives of Sir W. Knevet, 1. Alice, granddaughter of Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthyn. 2. Joan, daughter of Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham. 3. Joan, daughter of Thomas Courtney, Earl of Devon.

e. Quarterly, 1 and 4, bendy arg. and gu. Cailly. 2 and 3, gu. a lion rampant or, Albini. Above it, Arundel et Sussex. Prince Duleep Singh says that this inscription is wrong, as the Cailleys were never Earls of Arundel and Sussex.‡ Again, it seems probable that the mistake was made by the glazier, when the glass was put into the Hall windows.

f. Quarterly, 1 and 4, chequy or and gu. a bend arg. Clifton. 1 and 3, chequy or and gu. a chief erm. Tattershall. Over it, Cayle et Tatysha (11).

g. h. Quarterly, 1 and 4, bendy arg. and gu. Cailley. 2 and 3, chequy or and gu. a bend erm. Clifton.

STUDY.

Here are two shields of arms of late 14th century date. One shows England quartering France. The lions of England are drawn in outline only on a yellow field. The shield is set upon a quatrefoil-shaped panel, plainly once in the Decorated tracery of some church window.

The other shield shows Arg. a lion rampant az. for Bures. At Hengrave Hall is preserved a magnificent MS. history of Hengrave. This was the work of Sir John Gage and upon it his printed History is based. In it is a note by another hand, probably that of Sir Thomas Gage, concerning this shield. It states that the shield was originally in Welnetham church, but that in 1823 it came from "Major Leathe's house" in Bury St. Edmunds as a gift to Hengrave Hall.

LONG GALLERY.

In one window are the following shields: a. England quartering France impaling the many-quartered coat of Queen Catherine of Aragon. The shield is set within a pleasant green wreath. The supporters are a lion and a red dragon. On a scroll below DIEV ET MON DROET. Henry VIII married Catherine of Aragon in 1509. He questioned the validity of the marriage in 1527. The shield is not likely to have been painted much after that date.

b. St. Edward the Confessor. c. East Anglia. d. See of Ely. These three shields are of late 15th or early 16th century date.

c. Sa. three bull's heads couped or, Crofts, impaling Kytson. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Kytson by his first wife (of unknown name) married Edmund Crofts of West Stow, co. Suffolk. This shield was originally in the oriel window in the banqueting hall, according to a note added to Sir Thomas Gage's MS. Remains of Antiquities in the County of Suffolk.

In another window are three shields of arms. a. Kytson impaling Donnington. Another note in the volume just quoted says that this shield was moved from the second window in the cloister in 1849. b. Arms of Gage. c. Arms of Darcy. These shields seem to be of comparatively modern workmanship.

A small window in the west tower contains an interesting early 16th century fragment. It shows a crowned female head upon a patterned red background. The whole panel is in the shape of a shield.

MORNING ROOM.

Here are two shields of arms. One shows Quarterly, 1. vert, a chevron erm. charged with an annulet between three wethers, Wethaby. 2. per chevron gu. and lozengy arg. and az. in chief two doves of the second counter volant. 3. or, on a cross gu. five escallops arg. 4. or, a chevron gu. between three torteaux. This shield was acquired at the same time as the shields in the library from the Thetford glazier, but it is not so certainly from New Buckenham church. Of the second quarter of the shield Prince Duleep Singh says that " it is a puzzle. Mr. Farrer informs me that he has met with nothing approaching it in English heraldry."*

Op. cit.*, pp. 328, 331.

The other shield shows Kytson impaling Paget. According to a note added to the MS. of John Gage's Antiquities this shield was given to Hengrave Hall in 1823.

In the window, also, are two 14th century roundels, with floral designs in green, red and blue glass, within yellow borders.

THE CHAPEL.

The great east window of the chapel is built in the form of a triptych. There are twenty-one lights filled with painted glass of the highest quality and to be dated in the first quarter of the 16th century. The subjects range from The Creation of the World to the Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and from the Annunciation to the Last Judgment. They read from the left across the window. In many of the panels the main subject has above and behind it subsidiary subjects, a practise not uncommon at this period. Great care and skill have been lavished upon the subsidiary subjects. In describing the subject-matter the main subject in each panel will be described first.

I. The Deity, dressed in purple robe and holding an orb, emits breath from His mouth to create a circular, blue and fluid world. The world is drawn in diminishing circles, in which are set mystical signs, including those of the Zodiac. The whole is set against a landscape and upon a red background painted to represent clouds.

II. The creation of animals and birds. At the top of the panel is a demi-figure of the Deity, in red robes, supported upon clouds and cherubim. Below are trees and water shown as wide rivers. Among the birds are a hawk with its prey in its claws, swans and peacocks; among the fishes are dolphins and eels.

III. Adam is created from the dust. Beyond trees are stags, and a bear is seen in the foreground. In the sky is a flight of swans.

IV. The Deity raises Eve out of the side of Adam, who lies asleep. Behind is a walled city (or, perhaps, a wall surrounding the Garden of Eden), and a river with large white boulders in it.

V. The Expulsion. An angel, in red and purple garments, drives forth Adam and Eve. Behind are city walls and Adam and Eve eating from the Tree of Knowledge which is covered with prominent golden fruit.

VI. On the left Adam digs. He wears a white garment with short dagged sleeves and yellow hem. On the right Eve sits and suckles Abel. Cain plays at her feet. The representation, in the background, of angels guarding the entrance to the Garden is modern work.

VII. a. The Flood. Noah and his family stand in the Ark. Noah is a finely dressed figure, as is the young man in green garments standing next to him. Various kinds of animals gaze out of the port-holes and also from a turret at one end of the ark. One half of the ark is of modern workmanship.

b. The Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. The towers of a city topple over and flames burst from its gates. An angel leads Lot and his family away. Lot's wife looks back and is turned into a pillar of salt.

VIII. a. The Annunciation. The Blessed Virgin Mary kneels at a prayer desk. From a demi-figure of the Diety descends a Dove in a glory. The Archangel Gabriel wears a white garment and has brilliant red wings. b. The Visitation. The Blessed Virgin Mary is greeted by St. Elizabeth outside the house of Zacharias.

IX. a. The Nativity is represented, as in continental MSS. and pictures, outside a delapidated stone-built shed. The Blessed Virgin kneels and St. Joseph stands before the Babe, who lies upon the full skirt of the Blessed Virgin's robe which is spread upon the ground. In the sky is a large star and an angel holding an uninscribed scroll. b. The Appearance of the Angels to the Shepherds. The angels are drawn in outline in the blue sky. The shepherds tend their sheep. c. The shepherds hasten to the stable.

X. The Presentation. Simeon, receiving the Child into his arms, is represented as a tonsured and vested bishop. His mitre lies on the altar. Behind him is a tonsured attendant. St. Joseph carries the offering in a basket and a candle. Most of the archway above is modern work.

XI. The Adoration of the Kings. One of the Kings is represented as a negro with large ear-rings in the form of bells. From the point of view of composition and colouring this is one of the most striking panels in the window.

XII. a. The Flight into Egypt. The ass is drawn in a spirited manner. It lowers its head to eat from a large tuft of yellow grass. b. The Massacre of the Innocents represented as taking place amidst trees in a walled town.

XIII. a. Christ in the Temple. The Child Jesus is represented as sitting upon a high throne with green brocaded back and golden tester. Below are the Doctors. On the extreme right appear The Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Joseph. b. The Baptism. The Holy Dove descends from the Father. There appears also the usual attendant angel holding a towel.

XIV. a. The Entry into Jerusalem. Our Lord rides upon an animal much more like a horse than an ass. That the artist could vividly portray the latter is clear from the "Flight into Egypt" scene. Beneath the animal's hoofs are yellow garments. A tunic of similar colour is worn by Zacchaeus, who sits upon a branch of a tree. Two people peer through windows set above the city gate. b. The Temptation, in three scenes. c. The Raising of Lazarus.

XV. a. The Last Supper. Our Lord hands the sop, in the form of a large wafer, to Judas Iscariot. Noticeable is the chair upon which one disciple sits. Behind is a large sideboard with various pieces of plate and candlesticks set thereon. b. The Washing of the Disciples' Feet. The towel hangs upon a rail above their heads. c. The Agony. Jesus kneels before an angel holding a chalice. To the left the three Disciples asleep; to the right Judas leads soldiers out of the city over a bridge. The angel and the soldiers are modern work.

XVI. a. The Betrayal. Judas Iscariot salutes Christ. St. Peter cuts off Malchus' ear. One soldier holds a brazier upon a long pole. b. A scene, the significance of which is not apparent. Two soldiers are stopped by a man in lay dress, who points backward to a walled city. Below, the two soldiers proceed alone.

XVII. a. The Flagellation. Our Lord is bound to a brilliant red pillar. One of the executioners wields a green birch rod, the other a scourge. Behind, a number of Priests and Levites look over a balcony. b. The Mocking. One soldier strikes Christ with a long yellow pole ; another places a palm in His hand.

XVIII. Two scenes occupying about half the panel each. a. In the lower part the Procession to Calvary. b. In the upper part, the Crucifixion. The thieves are crucified upon either side. Their souls are represented as ascending, the one as an angel the other as a devil. Above the cross are the sun and moon with faces. To the right Longinus the Centurion pierces our Lord's side, and the Blessed Virgin swoons in the arms of St. John St. Mary Magdalen clasps the cross. To the left are soldiers and mocking men.

XIX. a. The Resurrection. Christ carries a crossed staff with a purple pennon bearing a yellow cross. The sleeping soldiers wear brilliant blue and red surcoats over their armour. b. The Harrowing of Hell. Adam, Eve and St. John the Baptist lead the lost souls out of a red Hell Mouth at the bidding of Christ. The whole scene is set against a landscape.

XX. The Ascension. Christ ascends from a pillar-like rock. The Apostles are grouped round. The bottom half of the figures of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Peter, together with the keys at St. Peter's feet, are modern work.

XXI. The Last Judgment. This is the most striking panel in the whole window. Christ is seated upon a rainbow. From behind his head radiate palm and sword. His feet are placed upon an orb. Under His right hand is Venite benedicti p(at)ris mei possidete r(e)gn(u)m ; under his left hand (Disce) dite (a me), *maledicti, in igne(m) aetern(u)m. in slightly abbreviated form. Around Him are sun, moon and stars. The Blessed Virgin kneels upon a cloud with a scroll inscribed Surgite Mortui. St. Peter kneels opposite her with Venite ad iutium. Souls rise from the ground. They are in shrouds; among them are a monk and a bishop. Below fearsome red devils with blue wings await their victims.

In every scene, except that of the "Mocking," Christ wears a purple robe. The Blessed Virgin Mary wears a pinkish under garment and purple mantle. In the Annunciation and Nativity scenes she is bare-headed, having in one case a blue and in the other a red halo. In the Presentation scene she wears a white veil. In the Adoration of the Kings, the Flight into Egypt and the Crucifixion scenes she wears a purple hood. The reds in the window are brilliant and vary from deep ruby to scarlet; they are particularly noticeable in the Adoration of the Magi, the Ascension and the Doom panels. A beautiful golden yellow is used in the Entry into Jerusalem scene. Blue of various shades is used for the sky, save in the Betrayal and the Crucifixion scenes. These are excepted because so little space is left between the scene itself and the top of the light.

From Gage we can gather a little information as to who painted some of the armorial glass for Hengrave Hall. In his book is a transcription of a part of the building accounts.†

1527. Itm, paid to Robert Wright, the glasyar, for making of all the glasse wyndows of the manour place, with the sodar, and for xiij skuttchens with arms. iiij li.

1528. Itm, paide to Robert Wright for xvij foote of glasse .. .. .. vs. viij*d*.

1535. Itm, pd. to Robert Wright for glazing the tower with old glass .. .. xiij*s*. iiij*d*.

These are the only three detailed items, but Gage also prints from the book of accounts of Robert Watson, the "ruler of the building":—"Mem. that I Robert Watson hath paid to Robert Wright, of Bury St. Edmunds, for yt bargain made betwixt the sd Robert for glazing the windows of the manor place, xvj li.‡

Robert Wright was a glazier in a fair way of business In 1505 Thomas Lucas, Solicitor-General to Henry VII, began to build Little Saxham Hall. Various glaziers were employed, William Duxfield, of London, John of Colchester, Robert Beston, of Bury St. Edmunds Nevertheless, Wright did by far the greater part of the glazing, painting not only coats of arms, mottoes, quarries, and suchlike, but Biblical scenes for the chapel. The Hall was pulled down in 1773. Some of Robert Wright's glass eventually found a home in the east window of Rushbrooke Church, Suffolk, where it may still be seen. Wright did not confine his work to Bury and its immediate neighbourhood. In 1513 we find him contracting for work at St. John's College, Cambridge.††

It would be interesting to know exactly which of the coats of arms that we now see were painted by Robert Wright. Most of the armorial glass in Cloisters and Hall must have been painted before or after his time. He was painting glass for Little Saxham Hall in 1509, and we may say that a young man would not have been given so large or so important a contract as the glazing of that house. We must suppose that he had retired or was dead by the middle of the century. Most of the armorial glass actually painted for Hengrave Hall is a good deal later than that. We may say with fair certainty that he painted the Kytson arms in the cloisters and upper corridor, but not much more of the glass that we now see. Of the rest of the armorial glass we can only say definitely that it is English work of various dates from the end of the 14th century to the end of the 16th century.

We can be even less certain about the origin of the glass in the Chapel. It cannot have been painted by Robert Wright of Bury. It is impossible that a provincial glass-painter, with so English a name and at so late a date, could have produced these magnificent panels with their pronounced foreign flavour.*

There remain other alternatives. It is not likely, although it has been suggested, that Sir Thomas Kytson "came across" these panels during one of his many journeys on the Continent. Such glass would only have been painted under definite contract. The date of the chapel windows, obviously built to receive these panels, forbid the idea that the glass was the casually acquired spoil of a continental church, monastic or otherwise. A more likely theory, but one that does not appeal to the writer, is that Sir Thomas Kytson saw work like it abroad. When the time came to glaze his chapel, he gave orders for such glass as he had seen to be painted and shipped to England.

It seems easiest to believe that the glass was painted in London. There was no need to go abroad to obtain first-rate painted glass at the beginning of the 16th century, as is plain to anyone who has examined the windows in Fairford Church, the Chapel of King's College, Cambridge and the Chapel of the Vyne in Hampshire. It is now almost certain that Bernard Flower, the King's Glazier, painted some, at least, of the Fairford windows. It is quite certain that he painted four of the windows of King's College Chapel. Flower, a German by birth and living in Southwark, was dead by 1517. That date excludes the possibility that he painted the Hengrave panels, for Sir Thomas Kytson did not contract to buy Hengrave Hall until 1521. However, the panels may well have been painted by such a one as Galyon Hone, a Fleming and the successor of Flower in the office of King's

*Wright must be given his due. He did not only paint heraldic glass. In 1510 he painted a series of scenes from the Passion of our Lord for the chapel windows of Little Saxham Hall. The cartoons were drawn out for him by a man named Busshe. (Gage, Thingoe Hundred, pp. 148-150). Busshe was presumably a relation of "Bushe of Bury, paynter," who, in December, 1572, received two shillings "for paynting the bore's heade with sondry colors" for the Christmas feast at Hengrave Hall (Hist. Hengrave, p. 192).

Glazier.* At a date when Hone's work was being inserted into windows at Westminster, Hampton Court, Windsor Castle and King's College Chapel at Cambridge, we may surely look to London for the source of the Hengrave panels, until some positive documentary evidence bids us look further afield.

*The design of the Hengrave panels seem to point to a glass-painter more old-fashioned than and not so touched by the Renaissance as Galyon Hone. They are much more like the earliest work at Fairford.

A LIST OF THE ALDERMEN AND BAILIFFS OF BURY ST. EDMUNDS FROM THE TWELFTH TO THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

By M. D. LOBEL.

The following lists have been compiled mainly from the names of the officials witnessing charters. Copies of these are scattered throughout the monastic registers. The Registrum Nigrum, now in the University Library at Cambridge, and the Registrum Cellerarii, in the same library, are two of the most important sources. The former manuscript was written between the end of the twelfth and the middle of the fourteenth century, the latter in the fifteenth century. Some original charters have survived and are now preserved in the British Museum, in the Bodleian Library at Oxford and in the Town Hall at Bury.

As the early charters are undated we have to rely largely on the evidence of paleography for the correct arrangement of the twelfth and thirteenth century officers. There are a few other data. Normannus and Frodo witnessed a charter, dated for once, in 1112. This has been printed by Mr. Douglas in his Feudal Documents of the Abbey of Bury St. Edmunds. Wlf and Frodo witness a charter of Abbot Anselm (1121-48). As Prior Baldwin, a fellow witness, was superseded by Prior Talbot during Anselm's reign, and the sacrist Geoffrey, who is mentioned in the charter had held office from 1107, at least, it is probable that the charter belongs to the first half of Abbot Anselm's tenure of office.

Wlwinus can safely be made to follow Wlf and Frodo as he is found witnessing with Prior Talbot (Douglas, op. cit. p. 117).

Nicholaus and Humfridus were probably reeves under Abbot Hugh I as a fellow witness in one charter, Benedict the chaplain, is found witnessing two grants by Abbot Hugh.

CATALOGUE OF BENEFICED CLERGY OF SUFFOLK, 1086-1550.

By CLAUDE MORLEY, LIFE-MEMBER.

FOREWORD.

Our knowledge of such Clergy is drawn from six sources, of which the first is the most detailed :—(1) Parish monographs, wherein the lists are not always complete, though usually so from 1320 : Aldeburgh (Winn, 1926), Ampton (Suff. Inst. xviii, 125), Ash Bocking (loc.cit.,xi, 244), Bacton (l.c.v, 193), Badingham (l.c.x, 386), Barnardiston (l.c.iv, 160), Barton Mills (Lacon, 1912), Bildeston (Growse), Brettenham (Suff. Inst. viii, 117), Buxhall (Dr. Copinger), Cavendish (Suff. Inst.), Clare (l.c.viii, 234), Cockfield (l.c.v, 227), Coddenham (l.c.xvii, 131), Creeting (Rawl. MS.), Dennington (Suff. Inst. viii, 80), Eye (l.c.ii, 147), Framlingham (Green), Freckenham (E.A.Q. xiii, 71), Gedding (l.c.xi. 170), Hadleigh (Suff. Inst. iii, 272), Hawkedon (Rotherham, 219), Hepworth (Suff. Inst. viii, 392 and xviii, 66), Hessett (l.c.iv, 308), Hintlesham (Ryan, 1931), Horningsheath Parva (Hervey, 1900, 252), Icklingham (Prigg, 88 and 91), Ipswich Matthew (Suff. Inst. vii, 154), Ipswich Stephen and Stoke (Wodderspoon, 382 and 402), Keddington (Suff. Inst. iv, 162), Lavenham (Scott, 49 ; etc.), Lowestoft (Gillingwater), Melford (Parker, 32), Mendlesham (Mayfield), Mildenhall (Simpson), Nayland-Stoke (Suff. Inst. iv, 202), Pakenham (l.c. viii, 410), Poslingford (l.c.viii, 255), Rattlesden (Olorenshaw, 27), Rendlesham (Gent. Mag., 1821, 105), Rushbrooke (Hervey, 109), Shotley (Hervey), Stansfield (Suff. Inst. x, 351), Stoke-Ash (l.c.iv, 425), Stow Market and Stow Upland (Hollingsworth, 242), West Stow (Hervey), Stratford South (Brewster), Stutton (Crisp, 1881), Sudbourn (Tudor), Sudbury All SS. (Badham), Sudbury Gregory (Sperling, 122), Theberton (Doughty), Thetford St. AEthelthryth (Martin, 80), Thorington (Hill), Thorpe Morieux (Suff. Inst. vii, pt. 2, p. xxvi), Ufford (Maitland, 39), Waldingfield Magna and Parva (Suff. Inst. ix, 94 and 116), Wenhaston (Clare), Westleton (Suff. Inst. vii, 241), Whelnetham Magna and Parva (Hervey 1910, 395 and 407), Wherstead (Zincke), Wingfield (Aldwell), Wordwell (Hervey), Wortham (E.A. Misc. 5759-65 and 5778-87) and Yoxford (Suff. Inst. viii, 48): totalling sixty-eight benefices.

(2) Gage's account of Thingoe Hundred embraces: Barrow, Brockley, Chevington, Flempton, Fornham All SS., Hargrave, Hawstead, Hengrave, Horningsheath Magna, Ickworth, Lackford, Nowton, Rede, Risby, Saxham Magna and Parva, Westley and Whepstead: totalling seventeen benefices.

(3) Suckling's printed lists of north-east parishes are: Ashby, Barnby, Barsham, Beccles, Belton, Benacre, Blundeston, Blythburgh, Bradwell, Bramfield, Brampton, Bungay Trinity, Burgh Castle, Chediston, Cookley, Corton, Covehithe, North Cove, Cratfield, Darsham, Dunwich, Easton Bavent, Ellough, South Elmham, Fritton, Frostenden, Gisleham, Gorleston, Gunton, Halesworth, Henstead, Heveningham, Holton North, Hopton East, Huntingfield, Ilketshall, Kessingland, Kirkley, Buxlow, Lound, Mettingham, Fordley, Mutford, Oulton, Pakefield, Ringsfield, Redisham Parva, Rushmere North, Shaddingfield, Shipmeadow, Somerleyton, Sotterley, Weston, Willingham, and Worlingham: totalling fifty-five benefices.

(4) In addition to all the above, Lists are now (1928) hanging in the churches at: Akenham, Alpheton, Assington, Bardwell, Bentley, Blakenham Magna, Blaxhall, Boulge, Boxford, Bradley Magna, Bramford, Brandeston, Brandon, Brantham, Brightwell, Bures, Burgate, Burgh, Campsey-Ash, Carlton Colville, Charsfield, Chelsworth, Claydon, Clopton, Cretingham, Debach, Santon Downham, Easton, Monks' Eleigh, Eriswell, Erwarton, Eyke, Fakenham, Finborough Magna, Framsden, Freston, Friston, Groton, Grundisburgh, Hacheston, Hartest, Hasketon, Haverhill, Helmingham, Henley, Hitcham, Hoo, Ipswich Helen, Kettleburgh, Lawshall, Marlesford, Monewden, Newton, Occold, Onehouse, Otley, Parham, Reydon, Rickinghall Superior and Inferior, Rushmere South, Earl's Soham, Monks' Soham, Somerton, Sproughton, Stanningfield, Sternfield, Stradbroke, Tattingstone, Wickham Market, Witnesham, Woolpit, Woolverstone, Worlington and Wrentham: seventy-three benefices.

All these are copied from the Institution Books at Norwich, which do not begin till 1300-20; and the sole source of information during the two preceding centuries is from those (5) State Records that are outlined in Copinger's Suffolk. Some clergy's names emerge among the (6) Parish Books of the first half of the sixteenth century.

The above benefices total 212. Donatives, having no names of clergy preserved at Norwich, are: Aldringham, Blythford, Bungay Mary, Bury's three churches, West Denham, some Dunwich churches, Herringfleet, all Ipswich churches but four, Leiston, Letheringham, Redisham Magna, Rumburgh, some Thetford churches, Wangford East and Woodbridge: totalling fifty-two. Added to these must be our churches that were mere Chapels-of-ease, served by the clergy of the mother-church: East Bergholt (of Brantham), Botesdale (of Redgrave), Boxstead (of Hartest), Burstall (Bramford), Crowfield (Coddenham), Darmsden and Needham (Barking), Southtown (Gorleston), Hazlewood (Aldeburgh), Nayland (Stoke), Saxstead (Framlingham), Shelland (Haughley), Southolt (Worlingworth), Orford (Sudbourn), Sudbury Peter (Sudbury Gregory), and Walberswick (Blythburgh): which seventeen Chapels and fifty-two Donatives bring the benefices accounted for to 284. Yet for the following 251 the Norwich lists have not yet been transcribed and we have to rely upon State Records and such local information as emerges; but in no or very few livings are names quite unknown.

Norwich List UNtranscribed for:—Acton, Alderton, Aldham, Ashfield, Ashfield Magna, Badwell Ash, Aspall, Athelington, Badley, Barham, Barking, Barnham, Barningham, Barton Mg., Battisford, Bawdsey, Baylham, Bealings both, Bedfield, Bedingfield, Belstead, Benhall, Beyton, Blakenham Pva., Boyton, Bradfield, Bradley Pva., Braiseworth, Bredfield, Brome, Bromeswell, Bruisyard, Brundish, Bucklesham, Bungay Thomas, Butley, Capel North and South, Carlton, Cavenham, Chattisham, Chedburgh, Chelmondiston, Chillesford, Chilton, Clare-Stoke, Combs, Copdock, Cornard both, Cotton, South Cove, Cowlinge, Cransford, Culford, Culpho, Dalham, Dallinghoo, Debenham, East Denham, Denston, Depden, Drinkstone, Edwardstone, Brent Eleigh, Elmsett, Elmswell, Elveden, Euston, Exning, Falkenham, Farnham, Felixstow, Felsham, Finborough Parva, Finningham, Flixton both, Flowton, Fornham two churches, Foxhall, Fressingfield, Gazeley, Gedgrave, Gipping, Gislingham, Glemham both, Glemsford, Gosbeck, Harkstead, Harleston, Haughley, Hemingstone, Hemley, Henham, Herringswell, Higham, Hinderclay, Holbrook, Hollesley, Holton South, Honington, Hopton West, Horham, Hoxne, Hundon, Hunston, Iken, Ingham, Ixworth, Ixworth Thorpe, Kelsale, Kentford, Kenton, Kesgrave, Kettlebarston, Kirton, Knettishall, Knoddishall, Lakenheath, Langham, Laxfield, Layham, Levington, Lidgate, Lindsey, Linstead both, Livermere both, Martlesham, Mellis, Melford, Mendham, Metfield, Mickfield, Middleton, Milden, Moulton, Nacton, Naughton, Nedging, Nettlestead, Newbourn, Newmarket Mary, Old Newton, Norton, Oakley, Offton, Ousden, Palgrave, Peasenhall, Pettaugh, Pettistree, Playford, Polstead, Preston, Ramsholt, Raydon, Redgrave, Redlingfield, Rendham, Ringshall, Rishangles, Rougham, Sapiston, Saxmundham, Semer, Shelley, Shimpling, Shottisham, Sibton, Snape, Somersham, Sotherton, Spexhall, Stanstead, Stanton both, Stonham three churches, Stoven, Stow Langtoft, Stradishall, Stratford North, Stuston, Sutton, Swefling, Swilland, Syleham, Tannington, Thelnetham, Thorndon, Thornham both, Thrandeston, Thurlow both, Thurston, Thwaite, Tostock, Trimley both, Troston, Tuddenham both, Tunstall, Ubbeston, Uggeshall, Waldringfield, Walpole, Walsham, Walton, Wangford West, Wantisden, Washbrook, Wattisfield, Wattisham, Wenham both, Westerfield, Westhall, Westhorpe, Coney Weston, Market Weston, Wetherden, Wetheringsett, Weybread, Whatfield, Whitton, Whixoe, Wickhambrook, Wickham Skeith, Wilby, Willisham, Winston, Wissett, Wissington, Withersdale, Withersfield, Worlingworth, Wratting both, Wyverstone, Yaxley.

Of the following catalogue of the Clergy from 1086 to 1550, it is necessary to say no more than that the date is normally that of induction or, if such be unknown, any period during incumbency; though before 1300 it is usually the latter, since that of institution is rarely upon record: after 1300 "circa" indicates between predecessor and successor. Where doubt exists as to parochial or chantry status, the name is entered. The spelling of names is as I find it in A. Saxon, Norman or Mid-Engl., though often foolishly modernised by Suckling and sometimes ridiculous, e.g., "Ricardus de Ulflet" of Elmham. Names set back are known synonyms.

Here, excluding the 288 synonyms, are 5,841 individual incumbents' names.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS IN THE IPSWICH PUBLIC LIBRARY.

By Dr. Montague Rhodes James.

Nine medieval manuscripts, the property of the Corporation of Ipswich, are deposited in the Central Library there. The great kindness of the authorities has made it possible for me to furnish a more detailed description of them than has yet appeared in print. They were entrusted to me, and brought to Eton College for that purpose.

A brief and not very accurate notice of them by J. Cordy Jeaffreson is to be found on p. 257 of the Ninth Report of the Historical Manuscripts Commission. Some further details were embodied by me in an Essay on the Library of Bury St. Edmunds Abbey (Camb. Ant. Soc., 1895). With two exceptions (nos. 7 and 9) they come from the library of that Abbey, and all the manuscripts except no. 9 were the gift of William Smart, Portman, to the town library. A very much larger number of Bury MSS. were given to Pembroke College, Cambridge, by the same generous man, who must evidently have acquired a great "block" of the Bury books.* His gift to Pembroke College took place in 1599. I have discussed it, and described all the MSS. in detail in my Catalogue, published in 1905.

Each one of the books which he gave to Ipswich has its interest, as will appear from the descriptions given here; but I would single out for special distinction no. 3, for its splendid initial, and no. 8 for the really marvellous writing which fills its margins.

Ipswich No. 1. Ancient MSS.

Concordance to the Bible.

Vellum, 16 × 10¼, ff 301, 3 main columns to page of 73 lines.
Cent. XV early in a rather rough hand.
Binding modern.

Collation. ff. $1^8$ (wants 1), $2^8$, $3^8$ (wants 3) $4^8$-$6^8$ (plus 2) $7^8$-$15^8$ (wants 1), $16^8$-$20^8$, (wants 1), $21^8$-$23^8$, (wants 3 and 4), $24^8$, (wants 6, 8), $25^8$ (wants 1, 7, 8), $26^8$ (wants 1, 2?, 4), $27^8$-$29^8$ (wants 4, 5) $30^8$, $31^8$, (five left), $32^8$-$36^8$, (wants 2) $37^8$-$40^8$ (wants 6-8).
Given by W. Smart, Portman.

I have little doubt that it comes from Bury, but the press mark is gone with the first leaf.

Concordance to the Latin Bible.

The text begins imperfectly in Abner, continuing with Abnegare. Each letter had originally a handsome initial in gold on a ground quarterly pink and blue with white foliage. Some of these have disappeared.

* A revised list of all the Bury MSS. known to me is in Engl. Hist. Review, xi., (1926). p. 251.

B has a border on three sides.
I (gone) had a border of which the set-off is seen.
K. L. on one page have an almost full border.
O.P. (gone) T. three-sided border.
Ends imperfect in Vultus.

These Concordances are based on that of Hugo de S. Caro (cent. XIII) and there are many copies. A fine one is that at King's College, Cambridge, No. 40. See my Catalogue.

IPSWICH 2. ANCIENT MSS.

Beda super Lucam.

Vellum, 14 × 10, ff. 130, double columns of 40 lines.
Cent. XII late, in a very fine black hand.
Binding modern.
Collation (first quires wanting) iii$^{8}$ - xviii$^{8}$, xix$^{2}$.
Given by W. Smart, Portman: and doubtless from Bury.

Beda super Lucam (Patrol. Lat. xcii).

Beginning imperfect in Lib. 1 on Lc. II. 14, — pro nostra redemptione incarnatum.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lib | II | f. | 17a |
| | III | | 38b |
| | IV | | 60b |
| | V | | 83a |
| | VI | | 107b |

Ending 130 a: in laude dei et benedictione conclusit. Amen.
130b blank.

There is little decoration, but the initials to the several Books are handsome: no gold is used.

The writing is extremely good throughout.

IPSWICH 3. ANCIENT MSS.

Exodus glosatus.

Vellum, 12⅝ × 8¾, ff. 130, text in central column of 18 lines, gloss in smaller script on Left and Right of 43 lines or less.

Cent. XII in very beautiful hand.
Binding modern.
Collation. A$^{2}$, 1$^{8}$ - X$^{8}$, XI$^{10}$, XII$^{8}$ - XV$^{8}$, XVI$^{2}$, XVII$^{4}$.
Given by W. Smart, Portman, and doubtless from Bury.
F.1 is blank but for late scribbles "Thomas Alldus," etc.

On f. 2a is a magnificent initial almost full page: double frame of gold, panelled with pink and green patterned in white. The letter H in pink, panelled with green. The external ground dark blue, the internal gold, with beautiful convolutions in colour, containing small white beasts of a fashion seen in Canterbury books of the time. The opening words, "(H) ec sunt nomina filiorum Israel," in capitals red green and blue. The gloss written in the same hand as the rest of it. But the verso is blank: and this pair of leaves is separate and a blank is left for the initial and opening words on f. 3: which is curious, and suggests the possibility that this initial was painted elsewhere (e.g. at Canterbury), and either bought for Bury or presented to it. Below on f. 2 is an appearance of a washed out writing ; gloss begins :

(R) Rabanus. In pentatheuco excellit.

Text ends 130b : gloss ends : ob generalem providentiam quia omnes confirmat.

The writing is beautiful throughout.

IPSWICH 4. ANCIENT MSS.

Mariale.

Vellum, $11\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$, ff .133, double columns of 44 lines.
Cent. XIV, in a nice upright hand, pale ink.
Binding modern.
Collation. $1^{12}$ - $9^{12}$, $10^{10}$, $11^{12}$, 12 (three).
Given by W. Smart, Portman.

From Bury. At top of f. 1 in the familiar hand of Cent. XIV-XV is : Mariale sancti edmundi per J. abbatem M.xj. The marking in Roman figures is unusual : it prevailed at Norwich Priory.

The abbot John may be either John of Brinkley (1361-1378), or his successor John de Timworth (1379-1389). The word " per " in the inscription implies that he procured the book, not that he composed it.

The book has no original title ; it is called Mariale in the class-mark. The name was given to several treatises. I have not identified the present one.

The prologue begins :

Exordium salutis nostre dicit b (? bernardis, a small hole burnt in the leaf) fratres karissimi intenta curemus aure percipere.

The prologue is concerned with the angelic salutation of which the letters (83), the syllables (37), the words (15), etc., are numbered and discussed.

Ends :

Ego autem de paupertaticula mea quicquid mihi deus donaverit in loco tabernaculi deuotus offero ut occasionem dederim hiis qui norunt ex exiguis eximia cogitare et adicere semper magis ac magis super omnes laudes eius que maior est omni laude. Scio enim quoniam quy dixit, qui elucidant me vitam eternam habebunt, nuncquam didicit necque fallere nec mentiri. Explicit prologus.

Rubric F. 2a.

Quomodo lux. i. spiritus sanctus vel virgo beata in nobilitate speciositate bonitate precellit. Rubrica prima.

Maria dicitur lux. Hester XII. Judeis nova lux oriri visa est.

There are 151 Rubricae or sections, nearly all of which begin similarly : Maria dicitur, or, interpretatur.

The last is : Quomodo ipse d.n. I. C. matrem suam semper perhonorificavit et honorari fecit et facit. Rubrica Cli.

Salutare mariam que multum laboravit in nobis dicit apostolus.
Ending :

Cantemus domino gloriose enim honorificatus est, et ita per omnes plateas Jerusalem in eternum et ultra cantabimus. Alleluya. Amen. (thrice). 131*a*

An alphabetical table in single lines : 131*b*
Aurora-Virtus.

In large script : 133*b*

Est scriptus liber scribens sit crimine liber Scriptum sepe legat : ut sic cum virgine degat.

There are partial borders, and initials, in gold and colour, of good, if rather rough, XIVth cent. English work on ff. 1, 2.

IPSWICH 5. ANCIENT MSS.

Pabulum vitae. Januensis.

Paper, $11\frac{7}{8} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$, ff. 191, 36 lines to page. Cent. XV, in more than one handwriting, mostly rather rough and current.

Binding modern.

Collation. $1^{12}$ (wants 1-5 ?), $2^{12}$ - $7^{12}$ (wants 5 ?), $8^{4}$, $9^{12}$ (wants 12 ?), $10^{12}$ - $12^{12}$ (gap), 13 ? (eight), $14^{12}$, $15^{12}$ (wants 1, 4, 12), $16^{12}$ (wants 1), $17^{12}$ (wants 2, 4, and 2 more), $18^{12}$ (wants 4 - 7), $19^{12}$ (wants 3, 4 : 1 misbound ; 4 more wanting). Collation not easy.

Given by W. Smart, Portman. It may very well be from Bury, but it is mutilated at the beginning.

1. Pabulum vitae. A collection of short sermons alphabetically arranged : the first remaining is : de gloria.
Cum homo sit nobilis creatura.
The next : de gratia.
Ends imperfect in : de vita eterna. 77*b*
There are various gaps.
On 77-81, in another hand—
A list of sermons for Proper of time, beginning with :—
Dom. 2a (in Advent) quecumque scripta sunt. 78*a* Ending with :—
In dedicacione ecclesie. 80*a*
Explicit de diversis feriis et sabatis.
Incipit de martiribus Confessoribus et Virginibus, etc., from S. Andrew to All Souls.
Explicit dē sanctorum. 81*a* Incipiunt capitula totius libri (secē) Alphabetum Abstinencia-Vita eterna. Explicit Pabulum vite,— showing that 41 sections are missing at the beginning.

2. Another and a better hand for a quire : then the former hand :—
Januensis in opere quadragesimali. 82*a*
Filia populi mei indiuere cilicio . . . quamvis solemnitas quadragesimalis.
Ends in : In die Pasche

Maria Magdalena . . quamvis multe alie.

The whole collection contains 98 sermons (see Royal MS. 8 C. XI, etc.). "It is not the work printed at Augsburg (1485) as the 'quadrigesimale' of Jacobus de Voragine alias Januensis: author of the Legenda Aurea, etc."

IPSWICH 6. ANCIENT MSS.

MISCELLANEA.

Vellum, 11½ × 8, ff. VII + 182; largely in double columns of 67 lines; also single and double columns of varying content. Cent. XV and XIII.

Mostly in a very good small close black hand.

Binding modern.

Given by W. Smart, Portman.

From Bury: at top of f. 1 is what I have formerly mistaken for a press mark—G. 25. The 25 is really the folio mark, but the G (the proper letter, indicating Gregorius) is old. Indications of origin are in the text.

1. (1) quire (a), prefixed, is of cent. XV, in a decent hand, 42 lines to page: the first leaf blank, the last bound upside down: ff. ii-v are foliated (xv) 49-52; the others are not foliated.

Exhortacio op (tima; rust-holes from chain mark) ad devocionem de visione penarum purgatorii et inferni et de gaudio paradisi que visio demonstrata erat sancto Cirillo epo Jerosolimitano per S. The writer was certainly an Englishman and almost certainly named William. He is called a Canon in the title. I do not know of another copy of the whole: but part of the matter of ff. 97-8, " Asinus est caro hominis. Asinus inter omnia bruta horribiliorem clamorem emittit " occurs in a Lambeth MS. as a sermon on the text Cibaria, virga, onus, asino, etc. In that MS. it is unfinished, here complete. The possibility did occur to me that in spite of the word " canonicus " in the title we might here have another of William of Malmesbury's compilations—for the author says he was credited with " the grace of compiling," and uses the word " scriptitare " which is a favourite of William's. The historian Haimo, whom William transcribed, is quoted. But these are slight grounds to go upon. We do not, it should be mentioned, know the whole of William's work in compilation, but we have his collection of Roman historians and Roman law in the Selden MS., his Polyhistor of excerpts from pagan and Christian authors in the Harley MS. 3969 and St. John's College, Cambridge 97, his collection of Grammarians in the Harley MS. and his compilation of Gregory's Moralia in the Univ. Libr. Camb. MS. Ii.3.20 as well as theological and historical collections in Kk.4.6 in the same Library.

Dec. 4. Osmundi ep. c.; 30. Tr. S. Jacobi.

The ordinary Sarum saints are there, and many "martyrology" names.

The Litany has MM: Thoma (erased), Erasme, Edmundie, Christo-fore, Georgi, Blasi, Adriane, Dyonisi. cum sociis tuis, Maurici c. soc. Gereon c. so c. CC Edwarde (1st), ending Erkenwalde, Edmunde, Benedicte, Dunstance, Cuthberte, Virgins after Editha; Barbara, Helena, Apollonia, Agatha, Lucia, Agnes, Christina, Sytha, Cecilia, Venefreda, Fredeswida, Ghertrudis, Othilia, Brigida, Ursula, Wilge-fortis.

The influx of foreign saints is notable: but I am surprised at the absence of Armagilus.

I am reminded of a slightly later book of devotions (No. 14 Magd. Coll. Camb.): see my Catalogue pp. 24-37. There are many coincidences between the saints addressed in the two books.

Each volume has its older press mark.

I. on f. 4*b* has B 240.

II on f. 1 at top: Josue et Judic' glos' monachorum S. Edmundi. B 55.

Volume I. is a most remarkable book in respect of its writing. The hand of the text is admirable enough: but that of the margin is marvellous in its minuteness, beauty and regularity. Every page is filled to the edge: I find as much as 102 lines on a single one. In the lower margins they extend right across the page. Some of the matter is no doubt relevant to the text, but the writer has not confined himself to this: he has copied apparently whole tracts, and very long passages from the Bible. At the bottom of the page he usually indicates the source of his principal insertions besides (at the beginning) the matter of the text. Thus at f. 2 he writes: In textu oratio. In margine: De vii donis spiritus sancti. I shall not transcribe the whole of his references but only indicate those that are of greatest bulk or most interest. First, however, the text shall be described.

The same work attributed to Richard is contained in Royal MS. 3. B. XI. It is not in print and it differs from the psalm-commentary published with Richard's works.

A set of Collects, one for each Psalm (but none here for the Canticles) is among the marginal additions. It is that most frequently found, beginning with
Ps. 1 Effice nos domine tanquam . . and ending
Ps. 150 Deus qui nos celestis armonie.

We now pass to the marginal matter: f. 1*a* is blank. On 1*b* the text begins . . (blasphem)averit in spiritum sanctum non remittetur ei, etc. The indication at bottom of f. 2 is:—

SUFFOLK CHIMNEYS OF THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

By F. A. GIRLING.

There are few extant examples of chimney construction of earlier date than the sixteenth century. Before that time, ordinary houses were not usually provided with them. Primitive chimneys were contrived in the thickness of the walls of Norman castles as at Orford. These emerged on the exterior wall surface a few feet above the level of the fire and were in the nature of flues.

At Framlingham Castle, built in the late twelfth century, an advance seems to have been made, for flues are carried up through the walls to the top. There appear to have been no projecting shafts. The beautiful shafts on the castle date from the early sixteenth century. Some of these appear to have been built on the existing stone coping which presumably was the original top of the flues.

By the fifteenth century, in castles and monastries, smoke was sometimes carried off by " tunnels made on the Syde of the wall " as noted by Leyland. In small manor houses, the main fire was in the middle of the central hall and the smoke escaped through the roof. As evidence of this, in some roofs of the king-post type, which usually indicates early work, the timbers are encrusted with soot.

By the sixteenth century, the social habits of the people were changing, and there was a general desire for greater privacy. This led to the partitioning of the great hall of many old farms and manor houses into smaller rooms, a floor being inserted and bedrooms provided. The old open fire was made impossible by the new conditions and it was necessary therefore to construct chimneys and fireplaces.

In Suffolk, brick became a popular material owing to the absence of native building stone. Also the small size of the units made it convenient for this kind of work. Brick was so much in favour that, in districts where houses were normally built of stone, the chimneys were built of brick. An outstanding example of this is the magnificent brick chimney at Thornbury Castle, Gloucestershire, built for the Duke of Buckingham in 1514.

An interesting contemporary reference to chimneys occurs in Harrison's " England " (1577) :—" The multitude of chimneys latelie erected, whereas in their yoong daies . . . ech one made his fire against a reredos in the hall." Trevelyan says that :—" Elizabethan writers noted as innovations the use of glass instead of horn in the windows, and chimneys to draw the smoke out of the poor man's cottage . . ." John Aubrey (1626-1697) in one of his collections of notes has " Antiently before the Reformation ordinary men's houses, as copyholders and the like, had no chimneys, but fleus like louver holes."

It is frequently assumed that the open fire in the central hall was the only fire in a mediaeval house, but this was not the case, for chimneys were built to carry off the smoke from secondary fires in houses where a central fire was usual. Nevertheless, it was not until the sixteenth century that it became usual to build chimneys in smaller houses.

At this time many chimneys were built in houses which were already old. The walls of East Anglian houses consisted of timber framing and clay. Partly to avoid the risk of setting this alight and partly to avoid structural alterations, the chimneys were built in the middle of the house. At the Clock House, Little Stonham, is a good example of a chimney of this period built into an already existing house. Here the similarity of the ornamental motifs to those at East Barsham Manor House, suggest the second or third decade of the sixteenth century as the date when the chimney was built.

This practice probably gave rise to the Suffolk tradition of placing the chimney in the middle, even when building new houses. In the Ipswich Assembly Book 4 July 19 Elizabeth (1577), Mr. V. B. Redstone, F.S.A., has found the specification for the building of a small timber house at Holbrook. Here a chimney is shown on the plan in the middle of the house. Although this position was the most usual, it was not invariable. Wattisfield Hall, an Elizabethan house, has a magnificent collection of chimneys, all built outside the main structure, which is of the traditional timber framing.

A typical sixteenth century East Anglian chimney stack consists of two, four or six detached shafts, usually octagonal but sometimes circular or hexagonal in plan. They spring from moulded bases which in turn arise from the solid rectangular mass of brickwork which rises above the roof. The shafts themselves are slender and well proportioned when they remain in their original condition. Unfortunately, many have been shortened when repairs have been done.

At the caps, the brickwork is corbelled out so that all are fused together. They exemplify the expert manner in which the early bricklayers managed projections. Where bricks were considered too thick, tiles were used in the oversailing courses. The facets of the octagonal caps were hollowed out, and spurs inserted at the points, giving them a bizarre aspect. In stacks where the shafts are undecorated, the presence of spurs on the caps prevents the chimney from appearing top heavy.

Occasionally shafts were built singly, an example being the round shaft with a diaper pattern which surmounts the crowstepped brick gable of an outbuilding at Cockfield Hall, which was built about 1540 by Sir Arthur Hopton. It is similar to the brick finials at Crows Hall, Debenham.

When there were four or more flues to be accommodated it was more usual to arrange the shafts in pairs on a rectangular base. Good examples of groups of four shafts thus arranged occur at Helmingham Hall built by Sir Lionel Tollemache about 1512; Cliftons, Clare; Langleys Farm, Somerton; and Basts, Grundisburgh, built by Thomas Awall about 1520.

There are many groups of six shafts set in three pairs. Examples may be cited at Woolpit, and Thorington Hall, Stoke-by-Nayland. Shafts were frequently built in pairs as at Ufford and the Moot Hall, Aldeburgh. Some buildings have stacks of three shafts set side by side as at the Old Angel Inn, Brockford Street and the Valley Farm, Stratford St. Mary. Four set side by side occur at Monks' Hall, Syleham, and at Stutton Hall, built about 1520. At Wattisfield Hall there is a fine stack of five shafts in line.

The decorative character of chimneys was fully exploited by the English bricklayers of the sixteenth century. They reflect the energy of men engaged in a new art whose skill stamps them as craftsmen of the first rank. Presumably the evolution of the elaborately decorated chimney was influenced by the Renaissance. It seems to be a purely English development and its origin remains a puzzle. The craftsmen obtained variety of effect by skilled manipulation of projections and recesses in the brickwork. Patterns which appear to be complicated are remarkable in that they were achieved by simple devices. Commonly, all the bricks in a shaft were cast in the same mould, the pattern being obtained by placing the bricks in their proper positions one toward the other. The four shafts of the stack at Monks' Hall, Syleham, are built thus, so are two of the shafts at Framlingham Castle.

The spiral and its variations such as zig-zags and lattice patterns, were popular motifs. A more difficult pattern to achieve was the "hollowed honeycomb." The four-shafted stacks at Cliftons, Clare, and at Wingfield Castle, each have one shaft thus adorned.

Shafts built of very large square bricks or terra cotta tablets must be placed in a category by themselves. The tablets usually have on their outer face some decorative motif such as a fleur-de-lis, saltire cross or Tudor rose. Examples of this type of shaft occur at Ufford, Aldeburgh Moot Hall, the old Angel Inn at Brockford Street; the Clock House, Little Stonham, and the High House, Badwell Ash.

The fashion for building elaborately decorated and twisted chimneys was a transitory one, nearly all of them dating from the time of Henry VIII; but when it was in vogue, a great deal of building was going on all over England. This sort of shaft is to be found in widely separated districts; however, they are most plentiful in East Anglia.

It is of interest to compare Suffolk examples with those in neighbouring counties. In Essex particularly good specimens are to be seen at Newport, Little Leez Priory, Layer Marney and St. Osyth Priory. In Norfolk good chimneys occur at Methwold, East Barsham Manor House and Oxburgh Hall. Among the best examples outside East Anglia may be mentioned those at Aston Bury, Stevenage (c. 1545), Rye House, Herts; Hampton Court Palace; Compton Winyates Manor House; the old Manor House, Buckingham.

The slender detached shafts of the sixteenth century gave place in the seventeenth to more substantial stacks. The older form exposed a great surface area to the weather, and when built of poor quality brick, soon fell into disrepair. At first they were replaced by shafts square in plan and set diagonally one toward the other.

FRAMLINGHAM CASTLE.

LITTLE WENHAM HALL, SUFFOLK.
Octagonal brick chimney. Probably built about 1565-1569, when alterations and additions were made to the earlier building.

From this transitional type was derived the stack of fused lozenge shaped shafts which is a common form in Suffolk. A later stage in the evolution of this type is the solid stack with diagonal pillaster strips. A great number of such stacks were built during the seventeenth century on the base of much older chimneys. Complete new stacks were built on similar lines. A characteristic common to these chimneys is that they bell out slightly at the top. The top courses are corbelled out, each slightly oversailing the one below it.

There are, of course, a great number of fine stacks in the county, known to the writer, which have not been mentioned individually in this article, and no claim is made to an exhaustive acquaintance with all the chimney stacks of fine craftsmanship dating from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. If members of the Institute care to send particulars of old chimneys in their district, it might form the nucleus of a more complete record of those still extant in Suffolk.

WALL-PAINTINGS DISCOVERED AT THE MANOR HOUSE, MILDENHALL.

By THE REV. G. MONTAGU BENTON, F.S.A.

The Manor House at Mildenhall, said to have been built by Sir Henry North late in the sixteenth century, has recently been demolished. In one of the rooms on the ground floor was to be seen a fragment of contempory wall-painting, which, since its discovery some years ago, had been protected by a sheet of glass, placed there by the former owner, the late Sir Henry Bunbury. This interesting example of wall-decoration was for a time in jeopardy, and it is gratifying to record that, through the instrumentality of the Rev. H. Tyrrell Green, M.A., it has been removed to the Victoria and Albert Museum for preservation. (See Fig. 1). It measures 4 feet 4 inches in width and 2 feet 2 inches in height, and, although it was not at the top of the wall, appears, originally, to have formed part of a frieze. The design is painted in black and gray, and consists of foliated scroll-work, in which a siren-like creature is introduced on the right and a lion rampant on the left, a hind leg of the latter being bitten by what appears to be a basilisk, of which only the head has survived.

Subsequently, extensive remains of decoration were found behind a brick facing that had been built across a corner of the same room. (See Fig. 2). Unfortunately this inner wall had been partly demolished before attention was called to the paintings, which have since been totally destroyed. They covered an area 9 feet in width and 5½ feet in height, and were executed in black on a gray ground, with slight shading in red. The general scheme comprised three vertical panels. On the first panel was depicted a female figure with legs terminating in a floriated scroll. She held a mirror in the left hand, and may perhaps have been intended for Prudence—one of the Moral Virtues. Above her head was a tablet inscribed with a black-letter inscription, of which only the letters INTLY, followed by a heart, remained. The second panel bore a decorative device, and, at the base, the upper half of a winged figure playing upon double pipes. On the third panel, which was less perfect than the others, was the lower half of a male figure wearing trunk-hose cut into " panes," and shoes and stockings; the shoes, with rounded toes, had an embryo tongue in front. The right hand was clutching a bag fastened to the side; the left hand may have held a staff, or possibly a sword was attached to the girdle.

The designs exhibit the fantastic element common to the Renaissance period; and although Italian influence is obvious, it was doubtless derived through Dutch channels. The work dated from c. 1580.

I must add that I did not see the paintings myself, and that this note is based on information and photographs supplied by Mr. Tyrrell Green.

SOME NOTES ON BUNGAY CASTLE.

By Hugh Braun, F.S.A., A.R.I.B.A.

The town of Bungay occupies what is perhaps one of the most remarkable sites in this country. The River Waveney, pursuing a more or less direct course easterly from Diss towards the sea, on approaching the site of Bungay meets a spur of high ground thrusting northwards from Suffolk and diverting the stream to the north. From this point the river describes an immense loop round what is called Outney Common and, turning again southwards, resumes its easterly route to Beccles and the sea. From the point where the divergence takes place to that where the orderly course is resumed is but a few hundred yards across and this isthmus, at the base of Suffolk's far flung peninsular of Outney, is the site of Bungay town. Its flanks slope abruptly to the river, and protected by these scarps and the marshes at their foot, Bungay stands on a site which might almost be described as a natural fortress, accessible only at either end towards Outney and the Suffolk mainland.

The addition of two lines of defence across these unprotected ends of the isthmus would make the site an exceedingly formidable stronghold and it is therefore not in the least surprising to find that this has in fact been made by some early occupants of the settlement. Remains of the northern line may be seen in the deep ditch of which portions remain in the goods yard of the railway station, and the line of the southern rampart may also be seen on the northern side of Quaves Lane. This thoroughfare runs at the edge of the town ditch and it may be noticed that the two Olland Streets converge at the site of the south gate of the town.

One may speculate as to the probable period at which these defences were constructed. They are not apparently the work of prehistoric peoples and the site is hardly one which would appeal to the Roman especially as his road passed a mile or so to the eastward. The ditches probably existed in Saxon days, as the manor was known at the time of the Domesday survey by the name of Bungay Burgh, which latter word denotes a fortified town. It may have been the Saxons who first constructed the earthwork fortifications of Bungay as a defence against the Danish raiders or even the Danes themselves as a base for the protection of themselves and their Waveney-borne long-ships during the enforced idleness of an East Anglian winter.

It seems certain that at the time of the Norman conquest Bungay was a very important town. In Domesday Book, its entries occupy far more than their fair share of the Suffolk portion. After the Conquest was completed, Bungay was still in Saxon hands, being part of the estates of Stigand, the Saxon archbishop of Canterbury, whose wise surrender to the new regime had prevented the forfeiture of his property with that of most of the other Saxon landowners. was able to continue thus favoured for four years after the C but by 1070 William seems to have found that his assistance dispensed with and an excuse was found to depose him and him of his estates, including the town of Bungay. The lan acquired were put out to farm by William and Bungay fell to of William de Noyers, one of the less well-provided for of the Norman followers.

If we consider the position of this man, an usurper taking po of a large and important town, doubtless proud of its surviv Saxon borough in the midst of a conquered country, we shal once that his position was an unenviable one. If he was going in the place, he would need a more defensible residence than t timber hall of the period. It was probably William de Noyers fore, who followed the usual Norman custom of raising a castle in the centre of the town, deeply ditched about and summit strongly palisaded to form an effective protection timber house against such efforts as might be attempted by his tenants to burn his home over his head while he and his ho slept. The summit of the mound would have been approache timber bridge, sloping upwards over the western side of the The foot of this bridge itself would need to be protected from burning by an enemy and was thus defended by a small ditch mounded barbican between the castle itself and the western above the river. This barbican is now the Bungay Stock M was until recently a bowling green.

It is not known how long William de Noyers held Bungay king but he was in possession at the time of the Domesday of 1086 and may have continued to hold it until the death of Rufus in 1100. Soon after the accession of Henry I, however, that Bungay has changed hands, having been in 1103 bestow Roger Bigod,[1] one of the few great Norman magnates wh assisted the new king in seizing the throne when the arrow of Tirel had removed its previous occupant. Together with B Roger received the nearby manor of Framlingham[2] and it highly probable that it was he who, possibly dissatisfied wi little mound-castle of William de Noyers at Bungay, raised th earthwork which is now crowned by the lofty walls of Framli Castle. Nothing is known of Roger Bigod's sojourn as caste Bungay, if indeed he ever resided there, and he would seem t lived only a few years after his receiving the grants, for he die believed, in 1107.[3] If this be so, he would have been succee his young son, William, who, however, is known to have pe together with the heir to the throne and many another gallant Norman lord, in the great disaster of November, 1120,[4] when t white ship went down off the cliffs of Barfleur.

It was this disaster, which gave to Bungay its most famou and castellan, Hugh Bigod, Bigod the Restless, the Bold Bigod. his benefactor lived he seems to have been content to remain t and establish his position as virtual lord of East Anglia, but as soon as Henry was dead he showed his hand by ungratefully deserting Henry's daughter, the Empress, and giving his strong support to the usurper Stephen.[5] It is clear that, throughout his career, Hugh was one who believed in supporting his own, that is the winning cause, for, in 1136, on a rumour that Stephen was dead, Hugh seized the royal castle of Norwich and garrisoned it for himself, the king having to march an army to the place before Bigod would give it up.[6]

Four years later he again rebelled, this time making Bungay his headquarters, but "In 1140, at Pentecost, the king with his army came upon Hugo Bigod of Suffolk and took the castle of Bunie[7]" Two months later, however, Bigod broke out again and Stephen again was forced to march against him, but this time tried the expedient of giving him an earldom to keep him quiet.[8] This seems to have been just what Bigod needed, and thus in 1141 we find the new Earl of the East Angles fighting in the foremost line of battle for his sovereign lord the king at Lincoln field.[9] Unfortunately for Stephen, however, the battle turned against him, and he, with most of his captains, left the field a prisoner. Hugh Bigod had retired earlier on observing how matters were proceeding, and thus escaped capture. Next year he is on the side of the Empress Matilda,[10] and nine years later, in 1150, he is still found to be on the popular side.[11] In the summer of 1153, Stephen besieged him in Ipswich and succeeded in turning him out, but Matilda's young son, the future Henry II, was already showing that prowess which was to distinguish him throughout his reign, and the unhappy king, worn out with the twenty years of dreadful strife which had accompanied his tenure of the throne of England, was nearly at the end of his resources and before a year had passed his reign was over and the son of his rival, hailed by most of the country, firmly seated in his stead.

The new king, although but twenty-one years of age, was already a seasoned warrior when he came to the throne. He showed his strength immediately by putting down with a firm hand the unruly barons who for twenty years had kept the country plunged in the miseries of anarchy. Among these was Hugh Bigod, who was deprived of his castles,[13] although he was allowed to retain his harmless title as Earl of Norfolk.[14] By 1163, however, Henry seems to have considered Bigod sufficiently chastened for it to be safe to give him back his castles, which he therefore did.[15] Bigod replied by fortifying that of Bungay so strongly that he felt safe within its walls to defy Henry for all time to turn him out again. It seems highly probable that it was at this period that the great square keep was constructed, as this possesses definite affinity with that of the castle at Scarborough, which Henry began to build in 1157 and finished about 1174.[16] Moreover, in 1165, which may perhaps be about the time when Bungay keep was commenced, we find Henry founding what would seem, from the Pipe Rolls relating to it, to be one of his favourite castles, that of Orford, obviously intended to keep Bigod and his Flemish mercenary adherents in check as far as possible.

Orford keep took seven years to build, having been finished about 1172,[17] and it is doubtful whether the immense structure at Bungay could have been completed much earlier. At any rate, when rebellion broke out all over Normandy and England during the Easter of 1173 Bigod seems to have had no hesitation in joining in with the revolting barons against the king.[18] One of the leaders of the rebellion was the Earl of Leicester, who had gone over to Normandy to assist the rebels there but finding that Henry had already got them well in hand returned to England with an army of Flemish mercenaries in the October of 1173 and laid siege to the King's castle of Walton,[19] which —long since vanished "down cliff"—then stood in the north-east angle of the old Roman fort. The well manned and provisioned stronghold[20] held out and four days of siege convinced Leicester that he could not afford to waste time over its reduction, so he marched to Framlingham to join forces with Hugh Bigod. The two then marched on the royal castle of Haughley, which fell after four days siege during the first week in November. The two contented earls then returned to Framlingham, possibly intending to celebrate Christmas within its walls, but Leicester, finding that his army of Flemings was too great a strain on the resources of his hosts, decided to leave and make for his own city. To his dismay he found that two of the royal barons, whom he had thought were in the North, had marched southwards and were lying in wait for him at Bury St. Edmunds with a force of 300 mercenaries. The Earl tried to give them the slip but was caught as he was fording the river Lark at Fornham St. Genevieve. One charge of the royal army settled the affair. The Earl's little force was annihilated and he with his wife and most of his captains captured and sent to prison in Normandy.[21]

This battle took place about the 16th November, 1173, but, despite the blow it must have been to Bigod and the corresponding spur to the royalists, nothing seems to have been done to bring him to terms except a rather futile truce made with him by the King, the only terms of which were that Bigod was to dismiss some of his Flemish mercenaries. One cannot but admire the diplomacy of the tough old Earl when we read that the King agreed to conduct them to Dover and have them thence shipped home at his own expense ![22]

The truce was to last until May 19th, but unfortunately for the cause of Peace, an army of Flemings, 418 strong, landed in the Orwell and placed themselves under the command of Bigod, who at once beseiged Dunwich. Unsuccessful for once, they turned to Norwich, which was betrayed to them by internal treachery on the 18th June.[23] The King was at this time in Normandy, but on the 8th July he crossed to England, arriving at Canterbury on the 12th to do penance at the shrine of Becket. Two days later he was in London and on the 18th he had started with an army for East Anglia. Huntingdon surrendered on the 21st and the 24th saw him encamped at Syleham near Diss,[24] where he began with a great army of carpenters, five hundred strong,[25] to prepare siege engines for the reduction of Bungay castle. Up to this time, the principle form of siege weapon had been the small mangon worked by tension or torsion and having a low trajectory and a short range of fire, but Henry during his sojourn abroad may have learnt of the giant catapult or trébuchet which worked by counterpoise and hurled immense projectiles in a high arc over the highest walls. The first recorded use of these formidable weapons in this country is at the siege of Dover in 1216, but they were certainly employed on the Continent before this time and it may have been that Henry's five hundred carpenters were engaged in making them, for the first time in this country, at Syleham in the summer of 1174.

Whatever it was they were doing, however, there can be no doubt that it at last put fear into the heart of Hugh Bigod, for, before twenty-four hours had elapsed he had left Bungay and come to terms with Henry at Syleham. The interview was brief; the terms were unconditional for the Earl. Neither he nor the King left their saddles during the interview and in a few minutes Bigod was an outlawed traitor.[26] The Flemings were disbanded and sent home, this time probably "carriage forward." Bigod's castles were ordered to be destroyed and he himself disgraced.[27]

The great castle of Framlingham was almost entirely destroyed. Its palisades were thrown down and about a quarter of the eastern side of the great mound thrown back into the ditch whence it had been raised. The royal engineer, Alnodus of Ipswich, who had just completed Orford Castle, was called in to effect the demolition,[28] and it may be assumed that it was he also who commenced the destruction of Bungay Castle by driving the mine gallery across the foundations of the south-west angle of its keep. It appears, however, that Bigod ransomed the great tower by paying one thousand marks,[29] which probably represents more than fifteen thousand pounds sterling, and it may be for this reason that we have had the good fortune to find that the mine system was left unfinished and thus can appreciate the intention of its designer.

The surrender of Hugh Bigod seems to have broken the back of the rebellion for good, within a week the remainder of the disloyal barons had surrendered and peace restored once more. Two years or so later, Bigod the Restless, battle-weary, found peace at last; fighting to the end in distant Syria.[30]

Hugh Bigod's son, Roger, did not come into his heritage during the lifetime of the king who had suffered so much from his father's turbulence,* but the next king, Richard I, was not long in restoring him to his estates, returning them, for a consideration of yet another thousand marks, as soon as he came to the throne in 1189.[31] Roger does not seem to have done anything to Bungay Castle, probably because he

*It seems quite possible that, after the disgrace of Hugh Bigod, Bungay may have been given by Henry to Roger, brother of his great Justiciar, Ranulf de Glanville, for about the year 1188 (not 1160, as incorrectly stated by Dudgale) Roger of Glanville, who had meanwhile married Juliana, Bigod's widow, founded at Bungay the Priory of St. Mary, some remains of which, including the nave of the Priory Church, now the Parish Church of St. Mary, are still to be seen. See Geoffrey de Mandeville, Round, p. 318.

concentrated all his efforts in building, on the larger and completely cleared site, the huge castle of Framlingham, which he erected in the very latest fashion, keep-less but with lofty, many-towered curtain walls for defence against the great catapults which were coming into fashion.

Framlingham Castle continued to be the chief seat of the Bigods and their successors from this time onwards and Bungay's history fades into the background before the splendour of its neighbour. Roger married Isobel Plantagenet and their son Hugh succeeded his father in 1215, at a time when King John was honouring Framlingham Castle with his presence. Hugh married Maud, daughter of William Marshal, the great Earl of Pembroke, and, dying in 1225, was succeeded by their son Roger, who married Isobel, sister of the King of Scots, but died without issue in 1269.

The line then changed, and Roger's nephew, his namesake, became the fifth Earl of Norfolk. This Roger was the son of his uncle Roger's brother Hugh, by his second marriage with Joan Stuteville.[32] This change to a colateral succession seems to have brought out all the characteristics of the Bigod blood, Roger from the beginning trying to live up to the reputation of his ancestor the Bold Bigod. The stories told of his defiance against the royal authority are too well known to be related here. The interest attaching to him in connection with Bungay Castle is that he seems at last to have taken it in hand, obtaining in 1294 a license to crenellate his " house " of " Bungeye."[33] It would seem that its use as a castle had lapsed after the surrender of 1174. It is doubtless as a result of obtaining his license that the existing lofty curtain walls were built, not only round the original mound but also to the little barbican bailey, outside the twin-towered gatehouse, which is of this period also. There was another gatehouse of approximately the same design through which the barbican bailey was approached from the huge outer bailey or Castle Yard, surrounded by the mighty ramparts of the Castle Hills, which were probably thrown up by Hugh Bigod the Restless at the same time as he built the keep. The style of the work of 1294 is similar to that which was being done by the king himself in various parts of the country at this time, notably on the Welsh marches as at Conway and Harlech.

Roger thus completed a fine new castle, retaining, however, the original keep of Hugh Bigod, which he appears to have re-faced—it had probably been used as a quarry for over a century—and also to have made the four windows on the ground floor, two and a half of which may still be seen. Scarcely was his work finished, however, when his stormy life came to an end in 1297, he having made restitution to his often outraged sovereign by leaving all his estates to the Crown. He had been married twice, once to Olivia Basset and a second time to Alicia or Aleyde of Hainault,[34] but neither had given him children. His heir would have been his brother John, who had, however, persisted in dunning him for money borrowed by the elder brother, who had therefore achieved his revenge by disinheriting the importunate offender.[35] The unfortunate John died in 1300, when his uncle John, younger brother of Roger the fourth Earl, attempted to recover the lost estates, but, being unsuccessful, was forced to fly the country and find refuge in Hainault.[36]

In 1312, Edward II gave Bungay to his brother, Thomas Plantagenet, surnamed de Brotherton, Earl Marshal of England, to whom Edward I, his father, had already given Framlingham. On Thomas's death the castle passed to a daughter and thenceforth passed through many different hands, finally becoming the property of the Howards in 1483.[37]

Thomas de Brotherton's daughter Alice had carried Bungay to her husband Edward of Montacute and their daughter Joan, born in 1348, brought the castle her birthplace to her husband William de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk in 1362, but he, possibly preferring to live in his great castle of Haughley nearby, allowed Bungay Castle to become ruinous. At his death in 1382 it is returned as both old and ruinous.

There is some indication that the castle was occupied and perhaps even repaired during the fifteenth century, possibly during the troublous period of the Wars of the Roses, but its day ended, to all intents, with the death of Edward de Montacute in 1362.

The Howards, lords of Arundel and Framlingham, could never have had much use for the deserted ruins of Bungay Castle, and it is perhaps not surprising to find that in 1766 it was sold to an inhabitant of Bungay, a Mr. Mickleborough, who intended to take it down and sell the stones as road metal. He set men to work on it with picks, and to this day can be seen the depredations they wrought, undermining the walls of the keep until they had brought down the south-west angle which had been preserved from the previous assaults of Alnodus of Ipswich at such heavy cost to the pocket of Hugh Bigod its builder. Fortunately for posterity, the masonry was so strong that Mr. Mickleborough's workmen broke all their picks before they had completely removed the castle, and the destructive gentleman found it would not pay him to continue. He therefore sold what remained to the wife of a resident of Bungay, a Mrs. Bonhote, who converted the gatehouse into a residence by building a cottage between its two towers, in which she lived and wrote books, notably the two-volume novel " Bungay Castle."

About 1800 she sold it back to the Dukes of Norfolk, who seemed at last to be realising that their heritage was slipping away from them. Unfortunately a lapse occurred when in 1884 the trustees of the Norfolk estates sold it again to the Bungay Lodge of Oddfellows, who built a large brick hall against the eastern side of the mound. In 1898, however, it was again rescued by the Duke of Norfolk, whose son has retained it to the present day.

During the centuries which had elapsed since the castle had been in use as a residence its condition had been steadily becoming worse. It had of course been used as a quarry for building material throughout, and much of it, the outer and middle gatehouses, for example, had vanished completely. Cottages and hovels had been erected against the walls and rubbish of all descriptions dumped in and about the ruins. Recently the keep and its surroundings had been used as a beer-garden, and the castle was usually described in guide-books as being " in the yard of the King's Head Inn."

In 1933, when the Feoffees of Bungay began to take notice of the forlorn condition of their castle, all that could be seen of it was two ivy-covered towers and a few snags of walling rising from a jungle of coarse vegetation and chicken wire and garrisoned by an army of scratching fowls. Under the leadership of their energetic Town Reeve, Dr. Leonard B. Cane, the Feoffees approached the Duke of Norfolk to endeavour to obtain a lease of the Castle to the town and after much negotiation they were successful. As a preliminary the poultry were ejected and the ruins cleared of ivy. An appeal for subscriptions was issued and met with a surprising result, money coming in from all over the world to assist in the preservation of the famous castle of the Bold Bigod, until within a few months half the sum of £500 appealed for had been subscribed.

Archaeological supervision was procured and on November 19th, 1934, the Town Reeve of Bungay cut the first sod of the excavation work which was to provide employment for otherwise unemployed ex-Service men for several months at least.

A start was made by clearing the space between the keep ruins and the gatehouse of the five feet or so of accumulated debris, and the plan of the great keep itself and its hitherto undiscovered forebuilding was soon recovered. The surprising discovery was made that the whole of the mound had been raised, at some period subsequent to the erection of the keep, with some twelve feet of fine gravel which was thus burying the lower portion of all the Norman walls. It was at once appreciated that if this accretion could be cleared away, the result would be a great improvement in the appearance of the castle, as the buried walls were uninjured and if exposed would show the castle rising some twenty feet higher than before excavation commenced. On the other hand, it was realised that the discovery would add enormously to the cost of the work if full advantage were taken of it.

For the present, therefore, it was decided to sink an exploratory shaft down the south-west angle of the keep to sound the thickness of the gravel and expose the stepped base of the great tower. This done, the gatehouse was freed from the remains of Mrs. Bonhote's cottage and the drawbridge pit exposed to view. The west wall of the keep was then cleared, as well as the two chambers within it, which were excavated down to the top of the gravel layer with which they, too, were filled. The whole of the interior of the tower was filled with fallen masses of wall and several other enormous portions of the fallen west wall of the keep were found to be lying on the gravel between it and the gatehouse, effectively preventing further excavation until they could be removed with explosives. The newly discovered forebuilding, however, being free from such hindrances, was excavated down to its original floor. At the time of going to Press, the available money having been used up, the excavations are being tidied up preparatory to being turfed and in that condition they will be left until the accumulation of further funds permits further exploration.

The soil taken from the excavations has been used to fill in the huge quarries made in the ramparts of the outer bailey by the local authority some years ago when material was needed for the repair of roads. These "Castle Hills" are like the Castle itself, also scheduled as an ancient monument so we are perhaps exceptionally fortunate in being able to repair one part of the Castle with the material taken from another.

Visitors to the Castle to-day should approach it through the narrow passage from St. Mary's Street at a point almost opposite the west door of St. Mary's Church. This passage represents the site of the bridge over the ditch of the outer bailey and at its further end from the street is the site of the outer gatehouse. This spot just within the outer gate is known as Castle Orchard. The visitor is now within the outer bailey or Castle Yard, the remains of the huge ramparts of which may be discerned in front and to the left of a person standing in Castle Orchard with his back to the passage just described.

Should he turn to the right round the cottages of Castle Orchard and enter Castle Lane, the visitor will be traversing the site of the bridge over the ditch of the inner or barbican bailey and half way along the lane, will pass, by a cottage, the site of the middle gatehouse, the foundations of which have been discovered beneath the lane and its adjoining gardens. If he will turn, immediately opposite the twin towers, and cross the intervening space, he will then be traversing the site of the permanent bridge across the now filled-in ditch which surrounded the mound of the original castle. His way will then be barred by the drawbridge pit between the gatehouse towers.[38] The last pier of the permanent bridge may be seen just in front of the towers and at the sides of the pit he may see the holes which carried the pivot of the balanced bridge, at the inner end of the pit being the slots for the counterpoise arms.

Within the site of the lofty curtain-wall of 1294, portions of which may be seen around,* stand the ruins of the great keep of circa 1165. This great tower, seventy feet square externally, is about the same size as the keep of Rochester in Kent, and thus comes about sixteenth in size amongst the seventy-five known rectangular keeps in this country. While thus not quite the largest keep in the country, it is second to none as regards the thickness of its wall, which are eighteen feet through, while one half of the north wall is twenty-three feet thick, probably the thickest wall in this country. The thirty-four feet span of the keep internally is too great for a timber floor-beam, so the interior is divided by a cross-wall, eight feet thick, running north and south, a door cut through it connecting the two halves of the keep.

*To the south of the keep may be seen the lower part of a curious wall-tower of unusual plan, this being a half-hexagon, open at the gorge. This tower would appear to stand at the junction of the rampart of the outer bailey with that of the inner curtain.

The usual place for the staircase in early keeps is at one of the angles, but Bungay keep has a staircase in the centre of the north wall, a feature which it shares with only one other great tower, that of Scarborough, built between 1157 and 1174. This perhaps assists one in arriving at an estimate of the date of Bungay keep. On a mezzanine floor in the north-west angle is a garderobe having a shaft which descends to forty feet below the present surface of the ground. The ground floor had four narrow, deeply splayed windows, which at present show thirteenth century heads, as does the little light in the north-west side of the stair. The head of the north-west window of the keep was found among the fragments littering the interior. The stair does not now descend to the ground floor, having been turned into a fireplace at some later date, as have the staircases at Norwich keep. There is no sign of a stair from the ground floor to the basement, nor does any sign remain as to how the ground floor joists were supported. The fall of one of the huge pieces of walling had badly damaged the south-west angle of the keep externally, and this has now been built up again by the present excavators.

Attached to the south wall of the keep is a large forebuilding or entrance tower, thirty-eight feet long and twenty-two broad with walls eight feet thick, the largest in this country save that of Portchester in Hampshire. Its walls are honeycombed with curious holes, the purpose of which has not yet been ascertained. In the south-west angle is a garderobe, the slots for the wooden seat being visible in the walling beside the opening. The oak seat itself was found on the floor nearby. Beneath the garderobe is a vaulted cess-pit, seven feet by five, the excavation of which had to be stopped when the depth of forty feet below the ground had been reached. Alongside the garderobe a shaft from a similar one on a now vanished upper floor may be seen.

In the north-west angle of the forebuilding may be seen what is believed to be the unfinished mine of 1174. This is a gallery, twenty-six feet long, cutting across the angle of the keep and having two incomplete lateral galleries leaving it near its centre.

The keep has been destroyed above its entrance floor, so that no hope can be entertained of ever discovering the entrance, but it is to be hoped that some future date may see the area outside the east face of the forebuilding cleared and the external stair which may possibly exist there fully exposed.

If the visitor will stand between the twin towers of the gateway and look outwards towards the river he will be looking over the site of the inner bailey, the walls of which still survive for the most part, although sections have fallen outwards into the ditches at their foot. In this enclosure were once the domestic buildings of the castle, its great hall, kitchens, bowers and chapel. One day it is hoped to examine this bailey for the foundations of buildings which are known to exist under the turf, showing through occasionally during dry summers.

For the present, however, we must be content with the tidying up which has been effected and which has enabled visitors more easily to appreciate the ancient grandeur of the great tower of Bungay, the raison d'etre perhaps for the boast of the Bold Bigod—

> " Were I in my Castle of Bungaye
> Above the Water of Waveney,
> I would ne care for the King of Cockneye,
> And all his meiny* ! "

*Pronounced " mainy " and meaning " retinue."

SCREENWORK IN THE COUNTY OF SUFFOLK.

PART IV. SOUTHWOLD.

WITH ADDITIONAL NOTES ON REMAINS AT BARNINGHAM, SOUTH ELMHAM ST. MARGARET AND RATTLESDEN.

By the REV. W. W. LILLIE, M.A.

The screenwork and paintings at Southwold were omitted from the earlier parts of this survey so that they might receive the more detailed treatment their splendour deserves. There are, however, certain notes to be added to supplement the account of the " Panels painted with Saints " in the Proceedings of last year. A fresh visit to Barningham was rewarded by the sight of considerable remains of painting on the panels. To the north of the doorway, traces of robes in gold, or edged with gold, could be seen, and in one of them flowers or grass of a foreground. To the south, the first panel is quite defaced, the third and fourth show only a foreground, but the second has remains of yellow and green, and contained a figure wearing a crown or chaplet, and perhaps a golden morse. Was this S. Dorothy? At a re-examination of the figures at S. Elmham St. Margaret the Rev. Christopher Woodforde convinced me that the Bishop described as " carrying what appears to be a boat " must be S. Hubert. The lines which looked like the shrouds of a boat are the ribbon or cord by which the huntsman's horn was hung about him. Representations of S. Hubert, the patron of hunters, are rare in East Anglia. On the screen at Litcham, in Norfolk, is shown the episode of his conversion. At Rattlesden, in the shadow of the modern sedilia, are eight 15th century panels with figures not quite obliterated. They may have formed part of an Apostle series. S. John the Evangelist, S. Philip with his basket of loaves, and a Bishop, vested, with crozier, and hand raised in benediction, can be made out. The other five figures are almost gone. The spandrels of the tracery at the head of the panels are delicately carved with roses, lilies, and geometrical designs, and have their original colouring.

Southwold is one of the greater churches of East Anglia, a building of light and space and colour. Bearing in mind the principles of design required in such an environment, allowing also for the loss of the crowning glory of the chancel screen in its loft and Rood, and for the mutilated condition of much else in the three screens facing the nave, the beholder must doubt whether a dozen churches in the whole of fifteenth century England could have shown so fine a sight.* These lofty screens, extending north and south the whole width of the church, served both as the sole structural division between nave and chancel, and as the focus and gateway of the people's worship.

PLATE IV. The Orders of Angels

PLATE IV. The Orders of Angels

The parclose screen between the choir and its aisles is an unusual example of later Perpendicular style. The loft especially, one of the few surviving in the eastern counties, emphasises the almost Renaissance feeling of the choir woodwork† at Southwold. But the rood and aisle screens, with their deep and richly-moulded framing, their elaborate buttresses, their rich colour, and the tendril-like clusters of tracery under the arches, are in the very height of the older tradition of Norwich and the Broads. The loft of the roodscreen appears to have had a second and smaller vaulted canopy above the first, even richer than that at Eye.

The iconography of these screens was no less elaborate than the woodcarving. In the centre, under the Rood, were represented the Apostles, in gorgeous robes, brilliantly set off by the gilding of the backgrounds and the deep carving of the frames. To the south, twelve of the ancient Prophets were displayed. On the north, twelve more panels bore symbolic pictures of those angelic hosts who share the attributes and serve the will of the Creator. To-day the faces on the lesser screens are scored and damaged, and those of the Apostles on the roodscreen are partly repainted, with a Tennysonian air of solemnity, by Richmond; but the grand scheme remains unchanged.‡ It is to be noted that the Prophets, a favourite subject for the roodscreens of the Midland churches, are found but seldom in Norfolk and Suffolk. The Orders of Angels, on the other hand, are to be found in these counties alone.§

The three groups of paintings may be described in turn, starting from the north side of the church.

THE ORDERS OF ANGELS. In the north screen it was necessary to compromise between the comparatively narrow width of the aisle and the great scale and rich character of the roodscreen. As a result of this, the panels on which the Orders are painted are tall and narrow, and deep-set between heavy buttresses. The shape of the panels emphasises the tall, graceful figures in which the Norfolk painters delighted, and gives room for the starry canopy above, and the space of flowered foreground below. At the bottom of each panel there is also a short scroll, with pleasantly decorated inscription in black-letter. The depth of these panels within their frame causes shadows which would have obscured more normal colouring, but gives to the scheme of white and gold, so happily chosen, a peculiar richness of effect. This simple design, of golden figures, white cusping, and uniform background of green, powdered with gold, admirably sets off the elaborate variety of the main screen, and has a satisfying beauty of its own.

This screen invites comparison with the roodscreen at Barton Turf. In both screens the figures have that last light of medieval spirituality

†C.f. the aisle and chantry screens at Lavenham.

‡The lower part of the screen has lately been refreshed by the skilful hand of Professor Tristram.

§Barton Turf (Nor) keeps to the traditional nine. Angels of the Shepherds are found at Yarburgh (Nor), and of the Passion at Blundeston and Hitcham (Suff).

which was almost quenched in an age of commerce. There are also close parallels in the details of these two Orders of Angels. They have the same conventional, decorative beauty. The treatment of robes and head-dresses and wings is so alike as to argue at least a common stock of tradition. It is possible that the "Powers" at Southwold and at Barton were actually derived from the same cartoon, reversed; the position of the feet, the manner in which the scourge is held behind the head, the shape and type of the armour, are all alike. The face of the "Dominions" on the Southwold screen, the only one now clearly visible, is remarkably like that of the Barton figures. The screens themselves may well have been carved in the same workshop. Both of them have, in the upper part, that slender fringe of tracery so often seen round about Norwich, and, in the lower, tall narrow panels with a peculiar type of cusping.*

The Angels of the two screens are, however, by no means alike in their order. At Barton Turf, as Dr. James points out, even the normal sequence of "Thrones" after "Cherubim" and "Seraphim" is broken. To make up the twelve, Southwold adds Gabriel (the Angel of the Annunciation) and angels holding respectively a Shield of the Holy Trinity and a Shield of the Church. Going from north to south we have:—

(i) Angel with Shield of the Trinity. The figure is clad in amice, albe, and stole. On the scroll below is the inscription, "Orate p aiabs Iohne . . ." [Gueman and his wife Catherine, the donors of the screen.]

(ii) Gabriel (inscribed "Gawbriel"). The Messenger wears a cloak with ermine tippet and morse, and bears the sceptre of God's authority. At his waist is a shield, bearing a cross in outline.

(iii) Archangels ("Arkeangelus"). Wears a rich coronet, and a short embroidered cloak with low belt. He holds the sword of war† in his right hand, and the scales for the weighing of souls in his left. At Barton Turf he stands in the citadel of Heaven, but the scales are transferred to "Thrones."

(iv) Powers ("Potestates"). Clad in helmet and armour, a scourge lifted above his head, and a chained dragon below him. The probably close connection with the Barton "Powers" has been pointed out above, but at Barton the chained monster is a devil.

(v) Dominions ("Dominaciones"). Vested, and standing above a church, with triple crown, chalice and host, and sceptre. This is the best preserved of the Angel figures, graceful but impersonal, the head beautifully poised.

(vi) Cherubim ("Cherubyn"). The wings and feathered body are uncovered, but there is a morse at the neck, and jewelled clasps at the shoulders, and a cincture. The figure stands on the wheel of Eternity, the hands crossed upon the breast in adoration.

*Dr. James evidently makes a slip in calling the roodscreen at Barton "late fourteenth century"; it can be very little earlier than the Southwold screen.

†Rev. XII, 7.

(vii) Seraphim ("Sarafyn"). Like Cherubim, but with face and limbs fiery red, and a scroll in the hand, "Sce. Sce. Sce."‡

The chaplet of roses round the coronet forms yet another link with Barton Turf and the Norwich school of painting. A similar chaplet is worn by "Thrones" and "Archangels" at Barton Turf, by Gabriel in an annunciation scene from a reredos in the church of S. Michael at Plea, Norwich. This was noted by the Rev. C. Woodforde, who found another such chaplet worn by a lay figure in a fifteenth century panel in the east window of S. Peter Mancroft, Norwich. The Medieval Glass of S. Peter Mancroft, Norwich, 1934.

At Barton the Cherubim have wings full of eyes, and the Seraphim, instead of fiery face and limbs, a girdle and ? coronet of fire.

(viii) Thrones (Troni). A graceful figure, with a quaint and lively appearance of movement, clad in a fringed tunic, with jewelled collar and belt, and carrying a ciborium. At Barton "Troni" carries a church, and the scales which are given, at Southwold, to "Arkeangelus."

(ix) Principalities ("Principatus"). Has a long royal robe with ermine tippet, crown and sceptre, and stands upon a fortress.

(x) Virtues. The figure is vested, and crowned, the symbols being a vessel of fire and a second crown held in the hands.

(xi) Angels ("Angelus"). In amice, albe, and stole, looking down upon human souls held in a cloth before him. It is interesting to compare this with the Angel panel at Barton, where two naked figures kneel upon a rock at the angel's feet, and the angel carries a spear in his hand, and has an alms box at his girdle.

(xii) Angel with Shield of the Church. An angel, with ermine tippet and rich collar, carries the Shield with triple chalice and host.*

THE APOSTLES. The roodscreen is one of those works which refutes, by the richness and accuracy of its carving, the accusation that the later medieval craftsman had forgotten the skill and care of his predecessors. The designs at the head and foot of the panels below the rail, for example, are beautifully cut, and admirably fill their place in the composition of the screen as a whole. But the carving is planned to be seen in colour, and it is in its colour-decoration that this screen excels. Every fillet and moulding makes its contribution and contrast of colour, whilst the gilded patterns of gesso are extended from the dado, against which the figures are painted, to the tracery above, to the buttresses, and even to the mouldings of the rail. Not even the screen at Cawston can outdo this one in the brilliance of its decoration. (See illustration of the panel-head above S. Paul, in part ii of this series; and plates VI. (A and B), and VII., of the present article) and compare "Bramfield, detail of decoration," again in part ii). The figures, however, are not overwhelmed by their rich environment, but stand in bold and dignified relief. This is due, partly to the effect of depth in the gilded backgrounds, partly to the subtle counterchange of the principal colours in both robes and decoration, and not a little to the white cusping, with its stencilled flowers, which borders the panels. The depth of the backgrounds is obtained by the use, as at Ranworth, and elsewhere, of a tiled platform (patterned in red and green), then of a brilliant hanging, as of gold damask, richly trimmed along the top, and with a deep border at the bottom, standing almost as high as the figures themselves. Above this, the wall against which they stand, and the traceried heads of the panels, are counterchanged in red and green, and the lower tracery of the panels likewise. The mantles upon the figures are usually contrasted with the gold brocade of the robes beneath, with the gilded backgrounds, and also with the flowered field of red or green above the dado. They are painted in colours which must have been from the beginning full and brilliant, but never glaring.

‡Rev. IV, 8.

*The Orders of Angels will, no doubt, be fully discussed by Mr. G. McN. Rashforth in his forthcoming book, English Medieval Imagery.

The drawing of the Southwold Apostles is, without doubt, the work of the late Norwich school which made the famous series at Ranworth. A general resemblance is to be observed in the pose of the figures, in the heads, in the folding of the mantles, in the brocaded silks of the robes. But there are details which show that the resemblance is due to the use of some of the very same cartoons. The S. Paul of the two screens not only carries a sword and book of the same pattern, upon a mantle draped and bordered in the same way, but has a robe with a brocade of identical design. Lesser details of resemblance are the scimitar of S. Matthew, the stand-basket of S. Philip, and the chalice, especially the base of the chalice, of S. John.

The figures, starting from the north side, are :—

I. S. Philip. His robe has a very large pattern of brocade ; his mantle is of a dark green lined with brown ; a cross leans against his shoulder ; and a basket of loaves is in his hand.

II. S. Matthew. (Dr. James leaves it undecided whether this is S. Matthew or S. Simon, and whether the last figure is S. Simon with an oar or S. Matthew with a halbert ; but the symbols and inscriptions at Ranworth decide for us). This is a noble figure, with the crimson mantle, lined with green, and the huge scimitar with its gilded hilt.

III. James the Less has a dull green mantle held in graceful folds about him, and a fuller's club.

IV. S. Thomas, with a spear and an open book—a figure with a distinctly " medieval " pose about it.

V. S. Andrew, with saltire cross. He parts his cloak of red lined with blue, with the hand in which he holds the book.

VI. S. Peter, in a blue mantle lined with green, and embroidered at the edge, which hangs in fine folds over the brocaded robe. Upon the mantle lies his book, and in the right hand he holds the " massy keys."

VII. S. Paul (see above), in a red robe, with sword, and book covered in blue.

PLATE V. The Prophets, with S. Edmund.
A. Baruk and Hoseah.

PLATE V. The Prophets, with S. Edmund
B. David, Edmund, Amos.

PLATE VI Carving and decoration

PLATE VI Carving and decoration

PLATE VII. The base of one of the diagonal buttresses: perhaps the symbol of S. John.

PLATE VIII. The " Donor " panels at S. Matthew's, Ipswich. (See last year's Proceedings, p 189).

VIII. S. John—another of these figures that show that the art of the fourteenth century was never quite forgotten in East Anglia. But the "devil" emerges from a tall, jewelled, cup-shaped chalice not at all of English pattern.

IX. S. James the Great. The rest of the Apostles are bare-headed; the patron of pilgrims has a hat with scallop-shell, staff, and leather wallet. He wears gauntlet cuffs, slit at the sides. The face is obliterated and the colours are faded.

X. S. Bartholomew has a trimmed mantle of a dull red, an open book in one hand, and what, from its shape, must have been a knife, in the other. (C.f. the Ranworth "Bartholomew").

XI. S. Jude, in a white mantle, with his boat. The figure is badly defaced.

XII. S. Simon. The blade of his oar is visible; but the greater part of the figure is obliterated.

A word should be added on the gesso patterns of these figures, which for variety and charm are unequalled upon our screens. The first panel has a reticulated pattern of vine-stems and curling tendrils, the spaces between being filled alternately with leaves and bunches of fruit. The second panel has a "diamond" trellis filled with roses and small leaves. The third and fourth are variations of the first and second; the fifth and sixth likewise. The seventh is a more architectural design, with bosses and pointed quatrefoils; the eighth has a reticulated rose pattern; the ninth is like the seventh, but, being the panel of S. James the Great, with alternate scallop-shells. The tenth, eleventh and twelfth follow earlier designs.

A pleasant variety of leaf-trails and architectural patterns is used in the band at the top of the dado, with several shapes of cresting over all.

The painted niches and canopies at the base of the buttresses should be noted, as well as those carried out in gesso.

THE PROPHETS. In carving and construction the screen in the south aisle is like that in the north; but the decoration of the panels is not in the same style, and the paintings are neither so fine nor so well preserved. The shadow under the ogees is emphasised by the use of colour instead of white. Below this, the panels are treated as a niche, with painted canopy and carvings, and statuesque figures with their feet upon stone pedestals. Within an elaborate framing of wood, the effect is unsatisfactory. The figures, too, are stiff and formal as well as statuesque. Although taller and more graceful, they are in the same tradition as the West Suffolk and Midland "Prophets" and "Kings." The caps, the flowing beards, the robes and ermine, the loose scrolls at their feet, remind one of the famous array of Prophets at North Crawley, in distant Buckinghamshire. The architectural detail of the canopies is in a degenerate style almost unknown in England in the 15th century, and the cartoons for these paintings would appear to have been taken from Continental works. Dr.

James gives a list of the Prophets as follows :—(1) Baruch ; (2) Ose(e) (3) Naum ; (4) Jeremias ; (5) (Helyas) ; (6) Moses ; (7) David (8-12) names mostly gone—Isaiah, Amos, Jonas, Ezekiel. But S Edmund, Southwold's patron saint, was put into this gallery, and the name italicised by Dr. James may perhaps give place to that of the King.

The figures best preserved are Baruch (" Baruch Pha ")—nearest the roodscreen—in loose white robe and hooded cloak, a wallet at his belt, and a crook'd staff in his hand ; Hosiah (" Ose Pha "), in a cap lined with ermine, long sleeves, trimmed with fur, and a long cloak with cape and open sides ; David, in royal robes, and his harp upon his arm ; and the shepherd Amos, with his crook.

EXCURSION IN EAST SUFFOLK.

JUNE 15TH, 1934.

The rendezvous was the Church of St. John the Baptist, Snape, which stands so prominently in its somewhat isolated situation on the Common. Here about a hundred members were gathered to listen to a very interesting paper read by the Rev. J. B. Brandram (vicar-designate of St. Augustine of Hippo, Ipswich), whose four years at Snape and Friston have been marked by archaeological zeal and discovery.

About the year 1155, the manors of Snape and Aldeburgh were given to the abbot and convent of St. John, Colchester, by William Martel, his wife Albreda, and his son Geoffrey. A cell was established at Snape, and the priory here, by its foundation charter, paid St. John's Abbey, annually half a mark of silver. The Abbot of Colchester was to visit the cell twice a year, with twelve horses, and to tarry for four days.

In 1163, Pope Alexander III confirmed to the prior and brethren of St. Mary, Snape, the churches of Friston and Bedingfield (Dugdale).

Upon complaint made by Isabel, Countess of Suffolk and patroness of the Abbey, to Boniface, that the abbot and convent of Colchester did not maintain a sufficient number of religious at Snape, according to the founder's directions, the pope, by bull dated 10 Jan., 1399-1400, made this priory independent and exempt from all control by the Colchester Abbey (Rymer). But the abbey of Colchester had sufficient influence to stir up the crown against this papal action, and a commission was issued for the arrest of John de Mersey, the prior of Snape at the time, who was to be brought before King Henry IV in chancery, and to find security that he would not leave the kingdom without the royal licence, or obtain anything prejudicial to the abbey in the court of Rome. The dispute proved favourable to the abbey, but it was not until 1443 that agreement was finally reached.

A seal of a prior of this house (c. 1200) is appended to two charters in the British Museum. It represents a prior standing, holding a book in his hands. Legend: — SIGILLUM PRIORIS DE SNAPE.

Florence Wulley, Bishop of Clogher (1475) and Vicar of Coddenham (1481-1500), died at Snape Priory in 1500 and was buried in St. Mary's Church, Snape; but as there are no remains left of the Priory, which stood about half a mile from the present Church, there is no trace of his tomb.

The Priory was one of those suppressed in favour of Cardinal Wolsey's projected college at Ipswich. After his attainder, the site and possessions were granted to Thomas, Duke of Norfolk.

The Church of St. John the Baptist is of flint and rubble. The south porch and door of early and highly enriched Perpendicular work; the mouldings have the four-leaved flower and shields alternately and there are well-carved figures of dragons and similar creatures in the spandrels. A good representation of a fish (pike) has been scratched on the left jamb of this door. One of the porch lights has recently been opened and glazed as a memorial of a parishioner.

The Perpendicular font has a square pedestal with statues round it, and groups of figures in the panels of the bowl. In the will of Nicholas Crane of Aldeburgh (1523) £6 13s. 4d. was left to find a Cope for Snape Church, and the Font was to be gilded and covered after the pattern of the Font in Iken Church.

John Brooke in 1521 left " 10s. to find light before the Sepulchre." He also gave to Margaret his wife " one cow and ten sheep on condition that she do pray for my soul and never curse."

Other bequests to the Church which were read, were :—" The making of a foot for Our Lady to stand upon accordyng to and as good as the foot that St. John Baptist standeth upon, 13. 4d." 1508, Ric. Fakoner. " To the Church a payer of chalices silver party-gilt," 1512, Ric. Stone. " A priest to sing at Our Lady's Altar," 1515, John Barbor ; and " To the making of a new sepulchre in church of Snape 20/– if made and painted with 2 yrs " 1526. John Barfott.

Mr. Brandram pointed out a recess for a wooden Easter Sepulchre which he had discovered when intending to make an organ chamber north of the chancel. Also a sundial, which had been replaced in a reversed position at the N.E. corner of the church. Other recent revelations include a piscina with a much mutilated head, and also tiles of the original sanctuary floor, 3 feet below the tiles of similar make which were recently placed there.

Mention was made of the tumuli near the Priory. One of these was excavated in 1870, and proved to be the grave of a Viking. The chief had been buried beneath the remains of his ship, his sword by his side, his finger bone retaining a gold ring, and his auburn hair still existing. It is assumed from the finding of earlier native pottery in the barrow, that this Viking died on one of his raids and was buried by his followers in one of the burial places of the district. The contents of this tumulus were seen in the Aldeburgh Museum later on in the day.

FRISTON.

Notwithstanding that St. Mary's Church was restored in 1905, the Rev. J. B. Grandram had much to show us of interest in this building. There is a transitional Norman south doorway. The western tower is very fine, belonging to the early Decorated period. Inside the porch was seen a very fine specimen of the Royal Arms of James I recently renovated by Mr. H. Munro Cautley, a photograph of which now appears in the book on Royal Arms he has just published (p. 51). It was found in pieces in the church tower, but on being repaired, is seen to be a magnificent set, carved in wood, and about 7-ft. square. Unfortunately little of its original colour is left.

In the vestry were a number of interesting objects—handcuffs, constables' batons, ancient chests, etc. The Church Register, unfortunately, has been ruined by damp and many of its pages are quite undecipherable. On the north wall there is a framed cover of a Tudor Bible.

LEISTON.

From thence the Excursion made its way to Leiston Rectory, where, in the large and well-tended garden, lunch was partaken. By the kindness of the Rev. C. B. and Mrs. Greaves coffee and lemonade were very thoughtfully provided. It is regretted that, owing to failing health, the Rev. C. B. Greaves has been obliged to resign the living.

A brief business meeting was held on the lawn, and Col. R. C. Bond was elected, on the motion of Mr. H. M. Cooke, seconded by the Rev. E. Farrer, F.S.A., to serve as one of the Trustees of the Cullum Library at Bury St. Edmunds. New members were also elected.

St. Margaret's Church, Leiston, dates only from 1853, when the old church, a thatched building, was destroyed. There is, however, a very fine Early English font, having a round bowl on a trefoiled arcade; also a rude and curious oak chest. Some interesting inscriptions were pointed out on the walls of the tower. The Rector gave a story of the Church from the pulpit, and later on, when the party came to Leiston Abbey, gave a very much appreciated address on the history of this ruined house of the Premonstratensians. The original building was founded by Ralph de Glanville on a site nearer the sea; but being unapproachable by car, a visit to the site could not be included in the itinerary. The seashore proving somewhat bleak and unhealthy a move was made to the present site in 1363, the old building being retained as a cell. But 26 years later the buildings were destroyed by fire, but the Abbey was at once re-built.

"When the S.I.A. visited the Abbey in 1890 they were told by Sir W. St. John Hope that the capitals of the arch of the crossing dated from the 12th, and not the 14th century, and these, he contended, were proof that the abbey had not been moved here from an earlier building, because that was not in accordance with the universal custom that was followed." ("E.A.D. Times" report).

Miss Wrightson, the present owner of Leiston Abbey, who purchased the property from Lord Huntingfield, lends the Chapel for the purposes of Retreats. By her kindness the party were allowed to roam all over the buildings, and the beauty of its setting and its garden is a very pleasant recollection of this visit to Leiston Abbey. Due acknowledgment was made of her courtesy.

THEBERTON.

The journey to Theberton Church was made via the hamlet of East Bridge in the unrealised hope that from thereabouts a glimpse might be had of the site of the original Premonstratensian Abbey situate on the shore by Minsmere Sluice. The route through these pleasant Suffolk lanes caused some of the party to miss their bearings, so that arrival at Theberton was not simultaneous. At the entrance to the Churchyard, where stands a German machine-gun to the memory of Lt.-Col. C. H. M. Doughty-Wylie, V.C., C.B., C.M.G., and others of Theberton who fell in the Great War, we were met by the Rector, the Rev. T. J. Bailey. The Church of St. Peter is a thatched building, of rubble and flint with stone dressings, almost entirely Perpendicular. In the north wall, however, there is a very fine Norman doorway consisting of an arch of two orders, each having a zig-zag moulding, and supported by a round pillar having a plain capital. The base of the tower is round, and is of flint; while the upper part is octagonal, and ornamented with flint and freestone.

By the south porch is an altar-tomb inscribed: "Here is a stone to sitt upon . . ." It commemorates John Fenn (1678), son of the Rev. William Fenn, Rector of this parish, who was "turned out of this liveing and sequestred for his loyalty to the late King Charles the First." His "misdeamours" included bowing "toward the funt and communion table."

The octagonal font (1480 or earlier) bears the emblems of the Evangelists, alternated with shields. The pedestal is supported by grotesque figures, with roses above. The Church plate includes an Elizabethan chalice.

Over the south entrance hangs part of the Zeppelin L.48, which was brought down in flames on June 17th, 1917. Sixteen of the crew rest in carefully tended graves in the new detached cemetery opposite the School. The following touching inscription is most appropriate, "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth."

Another stirring episode of the Great War is commemorated in the beautiful stained glass window to the memory of Lt.-Col. Doughty-Wylie, who won the Victoria Cross posthumously by his gallant leading of the assult on Sedd-el-Bahr, Gallipoli. A mural tablet on the south wall recalls his previous gallantry and services during the massacres of Adana in Asia Minor.

A great lover of the Turks, who in turn admired him, he, like General Gordon, went into action unarmed, and carrying only a cane.

ALDEBURGH.

After inspecting the Registers and the Communion Plate at Theberton Church, and thanking the Rector for his kindness, the party made for Aldeburgh. Here in the Jubilee Hall they were welcomed by the Mayor, Mr. R. Parris. Tea was very kindly provided by Mrs. A. Galsworthy, who is one of the Members of the Institute. A vote of thanks to both His Worship the Mayor and Mrs. Galsworthy was moved by Sir John Tilley.

Subsequently the party listened in the upper room of the Moot Hall to a very full paper prepared by Mr. H. C. Casley on the history of the Borough. This was read by Mr. G. E. Daldy, Assistant Town Clerk. The Borough regalia, together with charters and records were on display, by courtesy of the Mayor and Corporation.

A few of the party visited the little Museum, and others the large Parish Church of St. Peter and Paul, where they were received by the Vicar, the Rev. G. C. Danvers, M.C., who had served as Battalion Padre to the 2nd Bn. the Suffolk Regiment from 1916 to 1918. The Vicar had several brass rubbings to show. Interest was shown in the extensive repairs which were going on in the Church, the roof having been badly damaged by ravages of the death-watch beetle.

W. M. LUMMIS (Excursion Director).

BARHAM, SHRUBLAND PARK, CODDENHAM.

FRIDAY, JULY 20TH, 1934.

The rendezvous was Barham Church, situated on the ridge 1 mile east of the Ipswich-Norwich main road, and overlooking the Gipping Valley. After an opening prayer by the Rector, the Rev. L. B. C. Newell, the Excursion Director referred in his remarks to the origin of the name. Anciently it was " Bergham "—the place of barrows. It thus preserves an old Saxon word. An old manuscript copied by the Rev. John Longe commenting on this, points out that there are two barrows near here—one on the Coddenham Road, and " the other a little farther on in the same field by the Beacon road's side."

A few years ago three skeletons were found lying face downward in the Chapelfields adjoining, or close to Barham Church. There is a tradition that a battle between Saxons and Danes was fought on this site.

The Church (St. Mary) is an ancient one, mainly of the Decorated period, but underwent extensive restoration by the Dowager Lady Middleton in 1865. Some seats belong to the 14th century, the modern ones being copies of these. A most unusual feature is the raised side-chapel on the north, containing the Shrubland pew. The church contains monuments of the Booth, Southwell, Bacon and Middleton families, and five hatchments of the Middletons. That of Edward Bacon, 3rd son of the Great Lord Keeper, and his wife Hellen, who bore him 19 children, was of special interest. It is situated in the centre of what is now the vestry. The window in this Dormitory or Chapel (says Davey in 1827) bears a great resemblance to one in the Nave of Henley Church, and both were probably built by Sir Philip Booth of Shrubland, Knt.

Extracts from the Registers were read referring to some of the Rectors of the 17th century. William Kirby, the eminent naturalist (born at Witnesham, 1759) was Curate at Barham under Rev. Nicholas Bacon, whom he succeeded as Rector, dying in 1850, having been Rector 68 years. There is a window to his memory put up by Anna, Lady Middleton.

BARHAM HALL.

By the courtesy of Sir Anthony Compton-Thornhill, Bt., the party was permitted to walk through the drive of Barham Hall, and thus view from both sides the old Tudor wall. (The old Hall has been demolished). In the wall, opposite the Church, is an interesting blocked-up gateway, surmounted by the Southwell arms (Argent, 3 cinquefoils, gules, each charged with 6 annulets, or). Robert Southwell, who was King's Attorney for Augmentations, purchased Barham Hall of Henry VIII. He died Sept. 27th, 1554, and lies buried in the Chancel of Barham Church. His son, John Southwell, was " one of the Gent. yt waited upon Sr. Nic. Bacon, Lo : Keeper of the Great Seal of Eliz." Owner of Barham Hall and property in Norfolk, this he left to his son Robert, who sold a great part of it, leaving the remainder to his son John, who sold still more of the estate, his brother Thomas, who in 1655 sold it to John Lambe, and he in turn to Dr. Wood, Bishop of Lichfield, who was the owner in 1690.

The Rev. E. Farrer, speaking of the Southwells, pointed out that John Southwell had a great deal to do with the dissolution of the monasteries and was thereby much enriched. Lord Keeper Bacon was at the time Master of the Wards and Liveries. John Southwell, who was " his right hand man " thus obtained the manor of Barham from Ely Priory.

" BARHAM MANOR."

The present house (so-called) is a farm-house having gables of Flemish design, which the party was permitted to inspect through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony White. Despite restoration, the house and garden proved of interest. Mr. Farrer gave it as his opinion that its date was not earlier than 1620.

SHRUBLAND PARK.

The long procession of motor cars then turned back to the main road, and entered Shrubland Park by the Barham Lodge. By kind permission of Capt. the Hon. J. St. V. B. Saumarez, the site of the Old Hall, the Pleasure Gardens and the Tower were visited. At the Old Hall the party was welcomed by Mrs. Wilby, and the old Tudor Chapel which adjoins the house, and was at the time used as a garage, was inspected. The boundary between Barham and Coddenham passes between the house and the Chapel. The mural decorations (Booth arms and Catherine wheels) are similar to those in Barham and Henley churches; but some are of modern date. The Director read Mr. Evelyn White's paper on the Old Hall which was read to the Society at its last visit in 1920. He stated that the Catherine wheels were probably a punning allusion to Catherine, daughter of Philip Oake, who married one of the Booths. Her son, Sir Philip Booth, High Sheriff in 1507, built the Chapel just within the boundary of Barham.

" THE TOWER."

An interesting hunting-box of flint and stone, standing on a prominent part of the Shrubland ridge, is occupied on the ground floor by

Mr. Scott, head gamekeeper on the estate. From its summit an extensive view of the valley of the Gipping is obtained, and the spire of Great Finborough Church can be plainly seen. Two small swivel cannon (numbered 1 and 2) are mounted on its lead-covered roof. The upper storey, now unoccupied, is of quaint shape and has curious fixtures.

BAYLHAM HOUSE.

By kind permission of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. W. T. Bromfield this house, which stands on the Coddenham bank of the Gipping, was next visited. Here lived William Dowsing, Iconoclast, from 1626 to 1637. His signature appears in Church Rates (1634-1635) in Coddenham Church —documents which were later inspected. He married 1st Thamar, daughter of John Lea, of Coddenham, and six of his children were baptized there. Edward Ives lived here in 1642.

Attention was drawn to the discovery of Roman remains in the adjoining fields (The Pole or Pool Fields). Some of these finds were made in 1823 and were noted in the "Gentleman's Magazine." A fine specimen of a speculum found near here was presented by Sir William Middleton, Bart., to the British Museum in 1838. Photographs of this were shown. Mr. Guy Maynard, who has recently been engaged in excavation work here, produced an interesting drawing of Hamlet Watling illustrating Roman finds in this district. The site of the old Roman road which crossed the Gipping by a ford is marked by two stunted trees near Baylham House.

BEACON HILL, CODDENHAM.

An old Roman look-out station near the Needham Lodge entrance to Shrubland Park, overlooking the Needham-Coddenham Road, and in communication with another Roman station at Cousins Hill and the Creeting Hills opposite. The Rev. H. Copinger Hill considered that a Roman road from Combretonium (Brettenham) passed by here and on to Coddenham, and thence to Dunwich. The Rev. H. A. Harris gave his opinion that this strategic spot selected by the Romans was probably of importance in days before the Roman invasion.

Since our visit, the chalk pit where we "appreciated the situation" has this year (1935) been the scene of a fatal accident, a workman engaged in excavating chalk having been buried by a fall of several tons of it.

Attention was drawn to the old Roman causeway below the pit, which led to the now disused bridle-way known as Pipp's Lane.

Bridgeplace Farm at the four crossroads is a modern building; but stands on the site of a former house once owned by the famous Richard Hakluyt, when Rector of Wetheringsett.

CHOPPING'S HILL, CODDENHAM.

A most interesting place was Chopping's Hill Farm, which Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Haywood, kindly allowed us to look over. In the paddock were to be seen some huge ice-borne boulders. Anciently known as Thedwards, it was once owned by the Crane and Choppyne families.

Mr. Haywood has restored many features of this very early Tudor house, and interest was evinced in the smoke-blackened rafters, the king-posts, and the strange indecipherable inscription in Gothic characters on the beam above the old chimney-hearth. The building, indeed, has been transformed within the last decade.

THE CROWN INN, CODDENHAM.

A hot summer day had caused all to be gasping for tea, so that we were quite ready to sit down for welcome refreshment in the rooms of the Crown Inn. This interesting house was built about 1550 by a member of the Woodhouse family, who formerly owned Crowfield Hall. He was of " knight's degree " and used the house as a winter residence and dower-house. About the reign of James I it was licensed with the sign of the " Gryffon." A list of the known landlords was posted up for all to see. Throughout the 17th and first half of the 18th century the family of Cooper appear to have had charge of the inn. The house contains an excellent oak ceiling, a very fine back-door, and an immense old-fashioned fireplace with jacks, spit, etc.

THE POST OFFICE, CODDENHAM.

Formerly the " Live and Let Live Inn," the present Post Office, is a picturesque gabled building, and was restored to something of its original appearance in 1929. During restoration two fine mullion windows were discovered and are now exposed. At the same time the old houses adjoining were also restored by the late Lady de Saumarez. It is conjectured that these houses formed the Guildhouse of St. Mary Magdalene in the Middle Ages.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, CODDENHAM.

At the fine Parish Church of St. Mary we were welcomed by the Rector—the Rev. Goodwin Purcell—who this year (1935) has resigned the living and gone to Cressage, Shropshire. A full description of the Church was written by the late Rector (the Rev. Walter Wyles) and was published in the Proceedings of this Society in 1920. Little, therefore remains to be added here, except to point out alterations that have since taken place. The Old Shrubland Pew has been removed and transformed into a Lady Chapel, the oak pannelling, with its quaint carved Scriptural scenes, now lining the wall. An empty tomb with altar slab was then discovered. During his incumbency Mr. Purcell has restored the Bacon and Longe hatchments, and these now hang on the walls of the clerestory and aisles. Unfortunately the Royal Arms of George I (omitted in the list in Mr. H. Munro Cautley's book) were found to be too dilapidated to be put up again.

Photographs of former incumbents (the Rev. Nicholas Bacon and his wife—taken from the originals in wax—and the Rev. John Longe and Robert Longe) have been placed in the Vestry. Here, too, are the arms of Montague Bacon in wood. Davy's engraving of Coddenham Church, and two photographs of the interior taken prior to the 1886 restoration, may be seen at the west end of the Church.

The painted screen panels described by the Rev. W. W. Lillie, were inspected, as was also the Coddenham Parish Records, mainly in Candler's handwriting, and William Dowsing's, signature.

Opposite the Church is an old house formerly known as Jourdaines, and now as Manor Farm. This was the residence of Lt.-Col. John Daines, Surgeon, and a Parliamentarian officer of some repute, who served at Marston Moor, was instrumental in effecting the capture of Lincoln, and as a Major of Horse was present at the Seige of Colchester.

STONEWALL FARM, HEMINGSTONE.

On the homeward route the remnant of the excursion was welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Southgate to their interesting old house which contains a very fine early king-post with moulded cap and base. Here the Rev. E. Farrer discoursed on the Cantrell family and their residence, formerly known as Stonehall.

The President, Sir John Wood, Bt., expressed his appreciation of a very interesting day.

W. M. LUMMIS (Excursion Director).

ROYAL ARMS AND COMMANDMENTS IN OUR CHURCHES.

By H. MUNRO CAUTLEY, A.R.I.B.A.

That Archæology contains unexplored regions awaiting development is evidenced by Mr. Cautley in this book on the Royal Arms in our Churches.

For although many fragmentary references have appeared in ecclesiological writings, no expert hitherto has submitted them to an exhaustive analysis or produced a satisfactory account of their origin, legal obligation and general history.

Armchair archæology and the persistent copying of guesses made by old-time writers has yielded place to Mr. Cautley's method of diagnosing reputed facts and challenging their claim for acceptance.

Although the book deals with Church topics it must be remembered that it is written by a Layman for the general public and any dereliction from certain technical shibboleths of canonical orthodoxy and any " red rags " fluttered anent the Papal Bull, in no way impair the purpose of the book. Neither need we criticise passing allusions to the idiosyncrasies of Monarchs about which historians are at variance. Of King Charles II it is said, " He never said a foolish thing and never did a wise one." This shows that, at least, he possessed tact and charm.

The illustrations, which are about 60 in number, are from photographs taken by the Author, and are a marvellous exhibition of photographic skill, taking into consideration the inaccessability of many of the subjects, bad light and the lack of contrast and sensitiveness remaining in these old and faded paintings.

Readers will be grateful to Mr. Cautley for including a brief exposition of specific heraldic terms, used in connection with his description of the Royal Arms but possibly lack of space compelled him to limit his glossary and to reduce the list of Royal Badges to an extent that renders a few of them ambiguous.

Badges were devices distinct from Crests or Shields and were worn by dependants and servants and often appear as Inn Signs. They were hereditary, and for this reason we must remember that the Badges herein ascribed to Queen Mary, of a Sheaf of arrows and of a Pomegranate and to Queen Elizabeth of a Falcon holding a Sceptre, were inherited from their respective mothers, Katherine of Arragon and Anne Boleyn, and may refer to either mother or daughter.

In Preston Church there is a most interesting Coat asigned to Queen Elizabeth but Mr. Cautley gives cause to show that it is a Coat of Edward VI adapted to pass as that of Elizabeth. He also points out
